FEARING GANG, MAN DIVES OFF POTOMAC SPAN

Runs From Union Station and Commands Cab to "Highest Bridge."

DRIVER IS HANDED HIS TOTAL WEALTH

HEEDS RESCUE TRY AND GRASPS ROPE

Safe in Hospital, Describes How Thugs Dogged Him From Detroit.

August Lozzi, 30 years old, who gave his address as Bellaire, Ohio, jumped from the middle of the Highway Bridge about 6 o'clock last night in an effort to end his life.

He was rescued by workers and guards on the bridge, who sent him to Emergency Hospital, where he was treated for cold and shock.

According to the only witness who actually saw Lozzi jump from the bridge, Kenneth Macdonald, 21 years old, who was driving a cab stationed at Union Station, Lozzi ran out of Union Station about 5:30 o'clock and dashed up to the cab which Macdonald was driving.

"Take me to the highest bridge near here," he is quoted by Macdonald as saying, "and the one where there is the most water."

Starts to Highway Bridge.

Macdonald immediately thought of the Highway Bridge, and started driving in that direction. When the cab reached the bridge and had driven half way across, the passenger asked the driver to stop so that he could get out.

"If you are going to jump off this bridge," Macdonald said he told the man, "I warn you that the water is good and cold." He said the man paid no attention to him, and handed him $6 which he told him to keep. Before the driver could interfere, the man had leaped over the rail, and he heard the splash as the body hit the water.

Macdonald immediately started calling for help, and attendants who were stationed at the bridge rushed to the ladders which reach down to the platform under the draw span. Ropes were thrown to Lozzi, and he was pulled out by Policemen J. P. Comiskey, of the Fourth Precinct, and J. Hite, of the Traffic Bureau, and rushed to the hospital in the cab which carried him from Union Station.

Pursued From Detroit.

At the hospital he told a story of how he had been pursued from Detroit, Mich., where he had lately been employed in a large motor car company's plant as an expert metal finisher, by members of two gangs of "cutthroats and murderers" which he said he had been unfortunate in getting mixed up in.

He would not carry out some orders which were given him, he told the hospital attendants, and because he refused, he was told that he was to be "taken for a ride." In order to escape this fate, he bought a ticket for Washington and boarded the first train out of Detroit.

On the train, he said, he found that he had not escaped them, for there were members of two gangs on the same train, evidently following him. At the first possible station he left this train and took another, only to find that he was still being followed.

Hid in Drawing Room.

He hid in a drawing room of the train, he told the group of eager listeners who had gathered around the bed where he lay shivering at Emergency, until he had arrived in Washington. Here, when he left the train he found one of the members of the gang blocking his path as he left the station.

"I made a break for the nearest cab," he said, "and thought that if any one was to end my life, I would do it myself and not let a gang member have the satisfaction."

The $6 which he gave the cab driver was all the money he had. Before the driver left the hospital, where nurses and physicians were rubbing his hands and feet in an effort to restore circulation, he asked the driver if he would give him the change due him. The fare from the station to the bridge was 95 cents, and he was given the correct change.

Later he was taken to Gallinger Hospital, where he was booked for investigation.

G.O.P. Leader Strikes At Democrat Critics

John Q. Tilson Lists Major Accomplishments of Hoover.

(Associated Press.)

A charge that Democratic leaders had concealed facts in discussing publicly the first year of President Hoover's administration was made yesterday by Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, the Republican leader.

In a statement issued through the Republican national committee, Representative Tilson said that "in the welter of discussion in which some of our Democratic friends have been indulging there has been such a continuous concealment of the facts as to make it appear that there has been a studied effort at misrepresentation."

Representative Tilson made the statement public shortly after leaving the White House yesterday, where he has been convalescing since last Tuesday, following a severe attack of the grippe.

"So that the situation may be clarified," the Republican leader said, "and the record kept straight, I list here some of the high lights of the legislative proposals recommended by President Hoover and passed by the Congress."

The list consisted of six items: The $160,000,000 tax reduction program; the $500,000,000 farm relief legislation; the $230,000,000 public buildings program; the $300,000,000 good roads legislation; the act setting up a permanent Federal Radio Commission, and the reapportionment measure.

JOHN Q. TILSON.

"Most of these measures have their direct reflection upon business conditions, and more especially tax reduction and the buildings and roads bills," Representative Tilson said. "These last two measures represent the Government's own part of the very comprehensive program which President Hoover so promptly and energetic set about after the stock market crash last fall as a means of restoring confidence and alleviating unemployment in the country."

The building program would not only permit the Government to proceed with housing itself throughout the country, Representative Tilson said, but would "furnish employment

HOOVERS VIEW BLOSSOMS AT POTOMAC PARK

Great Crowds Come to Tidal Basin to See Cherry Trees.

15,600 AUTOS PASS OVER INLET BRIDGE

Publisher's Yacht Draws Interest of Throng at Hains Point.

LINCOLN MEMORIAL DRAWS SIGHT-SEERS

No Arrests Made by Park Police, Despite Big Traffic Flow.

The President and Mrs. Hoover led the Nation in coming to see the cherry blossoms around the Tidal Basin yesterday afternoon. They went for a drive accompanied by only one secret-service car, which led them through all the park system where great crowds were enjoying the warm spring air.

Despite the statement made by members of the park police that the anticipated record crowd of sightseers did not flock to Potomac Park and the Tidal Basin to see the cherry blossoms, Capt. Ray C. Montgomery, of the park police, announced that 15,600 cars passed over the Inlet Bridge between 10 o'clock yesterday morning and 6 o'clock last night.

This was an actual count taken by one of the policemen who was stationed there. The number was less by 10,000 than the record for last year, which incidentally was the record for all time in the history of the cherry blossoms.

Blooms Beginning to Open.

The flowers yesterday were just beginning to open and a pink border formed by the buds made a colorful frame for the picture of the basin with its sky-blue water and the picturesque skeletons of the trees which have not yet put forth their leaves. Within a day or two the pink will have changed to snow white when the petals open fully, and the picture will transport one back to Japan, the original home of the trees.

The weather man predicts warm weather for this week so that the cherry blossoms will experience favorable conditions for developing beautifully. No rain is expected, allowing the blossoms to burst forth in full glory without danger of being beaten to shreds by showers which caused such havoc last year.

One of the points of interest along the park drive yesterday was the yacht belonging to Cyrus H. K. Curtis, Philadelphia and New York publisher and owner of the Saturday Evening Post, which was anchored along the seawall near Hains Point.

Hundreds of persons stopped their cars to get out and closer inspect the snow white boat.

Crowds Around Memorial.

Around Lincoln Memorial the crowds were greatest. Sightseeing buses were discharging tourists there all day long, and the interior of the memorial was packed to overflowing. At 4:30 o'clock, when the memorial was closed, buses and private cars were still arriving, only to be waved away by the guards.

The tennis courts, golf courses, baseball diamonds and bridal paths in all the parks were filled all day, and the Reflection Pool, between the Lincoln Memorial and Washington Monument, was the scene of some lively model yacht races, at one time there being almost 50 miniature boats under full sail.

Photographers, professional and amateur, were out in force, and the Dry Agent Shoots Farmer to Death

Deputy Sheriff Kills Man as He Attempts to Run in Liquor Raid.

Richmond, Ky., March 30 (A.P.).—Ambrose Williams, 30 years old, a farmer, was shot and killed today when his home was raided by a party of officers who said they found a small quantity of whisky in his home. He was shot in the back as he fled, by Deputy Sheriff Lloyd Lane.

The shooting occurred at Owsley Fork, about 14 miles from this central Kentucky county seat. Williams was shot once, Lane firing from a doorway in Williams' home when the latter ignored a command to surrender, the officers said. Williams' wife and two children witnessed the shooting. He fell in hte yard and died before medical assistance could be summoned.

Other officers in the raiding party included a deputy United States marshal.

Mrs. Friedman Recounts "Horrible Experience" as Mate Is Freed.

ELUDED DETECTIVES, FEARING DEATH RIDE

Children Left Alone as Mother Was Locked in Detention House.

PAIR DID NOT SHOW BADGES, IS CHARGE

Domestic Drama in Wake of Hunt for Hit-Run Driver in Death of Doctor.

Coming under the suspicious eye of the police is "one horrible experience," Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Friedman, of 814 Four-and-a-half street southwest, agreed last night after the Fourth Precinct police absolved Mr Friedman of all suspicion of any connection with the death of Dr. Keene R. Forston, of 1731 P street northwest, who was fatally injured by a hit-and-run driver last Tuesday.

The Fourth Precinct detectives attempted to take Friedman in custody, and how he eluded them thinking that they were going to take him for "a ride" and the subsequent detention of his wife for three hours at the House of Detention featured the drama of mistaken identity which took place Saturday.

Mrs. Friedman gave her version of her experience with the police to a reported of The Post last night.

Denies Identities Disclosed.

"Three men came to the house last Saturday," she said. "They asked my husband to accompany them to the Fourth Precinct station. They said they were detectives but they displayed no badge. They didn't tell my husband what they wanted him for and they refused to tell me.

"They took my husband away with them. I saw him drive his car and the three men got into another machine and followed him. I was worried and I went with a neighbor to the Fourth Precinct station to inquire concerning my husband, but he was not there.

"I turned home bewildered." Mrs. Friedman continued. "I was thinking that perhaps something had happened to my husband; that the men who had taken him away were not detectives. When I arrived home the same three men were waiting at the house.

"As I approached they demanded 'where is your husband,' and I told them that I did not know, that they probably knew more about his whereabouts that I did as he had left with them.

"They then took me away. I went to some big building, the House of Detention, I later learned. They were nice to me there, but they kept asking me where my husband was and I said, 'I wish to God I knew.' Then I began to worry about my children. Dorothy is only 11 and Edith 9. They were at home alone.

"I sat in a room in this Detention House. It seem like I was there years when my neighbor came with a lawyer friend and the lawyer told the authorities, 'you've no right to hold her,' and they then let me go.

Husband Returns Home.

"I went home, but still was perplexed. I was worried about Ben. He never was away so long in the ten years that we lived in Washington.

NAVAL CONFERENCE'S COLLAPSE AT FRIDAY SESSION NOW FEARED

Plenary Meeting, Unless Canceled, Expected to Be Last.

BRITISH AND FRENCH EXPERTS DEADLOCKED

M'DONALD CONFERS WITH ITALY'S ENVOY

Repeats Parleys Carried On With France Hold No Threat to Rome.

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON.

London, March 30 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Friday's plenary session of the London Naval Conference, unless canceled, will witness, it now seems probable, collapse of the efforts of the world's five greatest naval powers to negotiate here a treaty limiting their fleets.

There are unmistakable indications tonight that the British and French experts are finding it impossible to evolve a formula that will give France security sufficient to persuade Prime Minister Andre Tardieu to reduce the French fleet without, in the British view, involving Great Britain in fresh military commitments.

The British official spokesman, preparing public opinion for the inevitable, said this afternoon:

"Great Britain is anxious and willing to do everything she can for peace, and for improving the machinery for keeping the peace and thus giving security against war. But any further military commitments are absolutely impossible."

Entangling Alliances Foreseen.

"For Great Britain to attempt any more of these would be tantamount to tying her down to engage in military operations without being able to control the situation from which they have arisen. No British government could undertake such commitments. It would be contrary to the feeling of the whole British people."

After the British and French political experts had presented each other with rival formulae Saturday, Foreign Minister Aristide Briand discussed the deadlock at lunch with Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson.

Mr. Henderson is understood to have proposed an act of international arbitration and discussed the possibility of Great Britain's undertaking preventive sanctions against an aggressor under article eleven of the League of Nations' covenant, through refusing to amplify article sixteen providing for actual warfare at the behest of the council of the league.

MacDonald to Go No Further.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, however, who is stiffer than the foreign office on these points, appears to have declined to support or at any rate to go further than the foreign secretary in making proposals that would satisfy the French.

At Chequers today Mr. MacDonald explained Franco-British negotiations to Dino Grandi, Italian foreign min-

Hawks Makes Tucson Landing in Glider Hop

Transcontinental Flier Is Towed 400 Miles During Day.

Tucson, Ariz., March 30 (A.P.).—Captain Frank Hawks, trans-continental flier, attempting a coast-to-coast glider flight, cut loose from his tow plane over Tucson tonight and landed safely in the dark at 7:26 o'clock. Automobile lights marked the airport for him. He traveled 400 miles in the glider today. The flight started at 7:45 a. m. at San Diego.

Phoenix, Ariz., March 30 (A.P.).—Capt. Frank Hawks, attempting a transcontinental glider flight in tow of an airplane, landed here at 2:10 p. m. (M. S. T.) today, completing the second leg of his flight.

Phoenix was not on the list of stops scheduled for the flight, but Hawks decided not to make the comparatively long hop from Yuma to Tucson.

San Diego, Calif., March 30 (A.P.). With New York his ultimate goal Capt. Frank Hawks, noted transcontinental flier, took off from Lindbergh Field here at 7:45 a. m. today on a proposed coast-to-coast glider-towing flight. Hawks piloted a cabin glider. It was towed by a single-

16 TRAPPED IN MINE ARE DEAD, IS BELIEF

Gases Dishearten Rescuers Fighting to Reach Blast Victims.

"BRATTICE" ONLY HOPE

Kettle Island, Ky., March 30 (A.P.). Although fearful that they fought for dead men, rescue squads worked ceaselessly today in their search through the dark reaches of the Pioneer Coal Co. mine here for sixteen miners entombed by an explosion yesterday.

Fifteen hours of arduous and dangerous effort had brought them to within a thousand feet of the spot where they believe the trapped men would be found. Hope that the sixteen, all but one of whom left families outside, would be discovered alive, had lessened steadily as the rescuers penetrated deeper into the corridors of the mine, and found with every foot of the advance that the air became fouler and more dangerous.

John Daniel, Kentucky State mine inspector, directed the squads. Under him was what experts at the mine called the finest assembly of skilled rescue men ever gathered for rescue efforts in this section.

The mine, which goes back for miles into the interior of the great mountain that overshadows this camp, is all there is to Kettle Island, and any disaster that threatens death to sixteen of the few hundreds who live here strikes at every person in the community.

No sooner had news of the explosion spread than groups of miners gathered near the entrance yesterday afternoon. Soon they were joined by another group, the families of the entombed. Only one of the sixteen was without a family, and he was a boy of 17. Several of them were foremen, most of the others were

NEW KIND OF TREATY SOUGHT BY STIMSON

France and Britain Must End Difficulty, However, for Its Success.

KELLOGG PACT IS BASIS

By ALBERT W. FOX.

A new form of political treaty, binding America to cooperate "by peaceful means" in making the Kellogg pact more effective and incidentally strengthening Article XVI of the Covenant of the League of Nations, is now under consideration by the American delegation at London. The role assigned to the United States in this program is dependent upon the ability of Great Britain and France to agree upon a security plan which will be exchanged for a lowering of the French figures of naval tonnage.

Secretary Stimson, who has always been partial to the league covenant, has assigned Ambassador Morrow and Senator Robinson, both league adherents, to the preliminary task of discussing a formula whereby the United States might conceivably ally itself with Europe in a program of peace based on the Kellogg pact and on the covenant. America would, of course, claim to be acting solely in conformity with the spirit of the Kellogg antiwar treaty, while the European powers would be acting in conformity with the covenant of the league.

The two paragraphs of Article XVI which M. Briand already has brought to the notice of the conference are the following:

"It shall be the duty of the council in such case (resort to war) to recommend to the several governments concerned what effective military, naval or air force the members of the league shall severally contribute to

CRASH AND ARREST END WILD TAXI RIDE

Cab Driver Is Held on Four Charges; Stole Machine, Garage Declares.

DRUNK, POLICE ASSERT

Culminating what police termed a wild ride in a stolen taxicab which ended after the car crashed into a sandbank in its second accident of the day, James Murray, 32 years old, a taxicab driver, of Massachusetts avenue near Fourth street northwest, was booked at the Seventh Precinct station at 6:30 o'clock last night on four charges.

Observing the man staggering at Wisconsin avenue near W street northwest, Policeman P. O. Mangum arrested him on charges of intoxication. In fast succession, three other charges were placed against him after calls began to come into the precinct station that a man resembling Murray's description had abandoned a taxicab when it ran into a sandbank on Thirty-first street extended and W street northwest.

On a call from the Eighth Precinct station, Murray was charged with joyriding in a cab which the Glassman Garage, at 2121 Fourteenth street northwest, reported the man had taken after having checked in another cab which he had been driving for the City Cab Co.

Eighth Precinct police telephoned charges of operating a car while drunk and leaving the scene of a collision without making identity known after he was reported to have collided on New Hampshire avenue between U and V streets northwest with a car driven by Elijah Van Meter, 65 years old, of Euclid street near Fourteenth street northwest.

$640 Loss Reported to Police.

James F. Brown, a guest at a downtown hotel, last night reported the loss of a pocketbook containing $140 in cash and a certified check for over $500. He said the loss probably occurred while he was sightseeing in one of the public buildings.

WIFE OF JACK HART DIES IN BALTIMORE

Spouse of Notorious Jail-Breaker Succumbs to Spinal Ailment.

ONCE LIVED IN CAPITAL

A famous character as the wife of Jack Hart, notorious jail breaker and fugitive from justice since last March, when he escaped from the Maryland Penitentiary while serving a life term for murder, Mrs. Kitty Hart, known also as Mrs. Kitty Kavanaugh, 35 years old, former resident of Washington, died yesterday afternoon at the Hospital for the Volunteers of America at Baltimore.

Death came after hours in which she had tightly clasped a locket containing a picture of her husband and called his name constantly. Entering the hospital December 15, she had been suffering from spinal trouble and softening of the brain. She became delirious last Monday and for more than fifteen hours before her death the end had been expected momentarily.

Mrs. Hart made her home here at intervals for a lengthy period. She was residing here on March 15 last year in an apartment at Pennsylvania avenue and Twenty-second street northwest, when Hart made his getaway in Baltimore. Washington police made a thorough search of the rooms and his other haunts here without locating the man, although belief prevailed that he was in hiding here.

On the 5th day of this month Hart was arrested by police in San Francisco, Calif., on charges of grand theft and was released on $250 bond. He had disappeared when that case was called in court there.

Mrs. Hart came into the limelight through her steadfast devotion and loyalty to Hart, who began serving a life term in 1922 for his complicity

Edge Balks at $3.25 Fee For Guests to See Him Eat

Declines to Appear as Exhibit for Benefit of French Diners.

Nice, France, March 30 (A.P.).—Ambassador Walter E. Edge, arriving here today in pursuance of his industrial inspection tour of southeastern France, had a shock when he discovered a large restaurant was advertising the fact that the American Ambassador would dine there this evening and selling tickets for 80 franc ($3.25) to those desirous of dining in the company of an ambassador.

Mr. Edge, who is on a tour of commercial study, felt this was carrying commerce a little too far, and announced he would refuse to be put on exhibition at any price. The management then arranged to have his party secluded from the other diners by screens, plants and palms.

In the course of the dinner the members of the Nice Chamber of Commerce complained that the American duty on olive oil was too high. Mr. Edge promised to list this complaint with the other data gathered during his trip.

Tomorrow he will visit Grasse, center of the Riviera perfumery industry, and then return to Nice, where his present trip will end on Tuesday.

Auto Hurts Sister Of Boy Hit by Car

Girl Is Injured Running Across Street 18 Hours After Brother Is Hurt.

While her little brother lay seriously injured in the home of 819½ I street northeast, victim of an automobile accident eighteen hours earlier, 5-year-old Audrey Perry was struck down by another car as she dashed across the street in front of the residence at 11 o'clock yesterday morning.

Like her brother, she was treated at Casualty Hospital and removed to her home by her mother, Mrs. Elmer Perry. The child suffered severe injuries to the left shoulder and abrasions about the face when she was knocked down by a machine operated by James Chaconas, of Eighth street near H street northeast, according to Ninth Precinct police.

Late Saturday afternoon, 3-year-old Curtis Perry received severe lacerations of the scalp along F street between Eighth and Ninth streets northeast, when he was struck by an automobile operated by John Bowen, 23 years old, of Fourth street near A street northeast, a boxer, and member of the Washington family of "Fighting Bowens."

U. S. Report Spikes Charge Of Juvenile Crime Wave

Decrease in Offenses of 17-20 Year Old Boys Cited by Children's Bureau Following Study of Chicago Conditions.

(Associated Press.)

The United States Children's Bureau yesterday produced figures to dispute statements that there was a crime wave among youths.

In a report based upon a study of crime among boys between 17 and 20 in Chicago, the bureau said offenses there by youths of those ages were decreasing both numerically and in ratio comparsions.

Census Bureau figures of the country at large also were quoted as showing the number of 18-to-20-year-old males sent to penal institutions as decreasing 11.7 per cent in the thirteen years following 1910, which included the World War period.

More detailed investigations will be made in the decennial census, the Children's Bureau said.

Chicago was taken as the sample for the youth and crime study because it was the pioneer city in providing a separate court for youths above juvenile court age and below the age of majority. Records dating back to 1915 were available to Dorothy Williams Burke, who made the study under supervision of Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, assistant to the chief of the Children's Bureau.

Though frank in its criticism of certain phases of handling youthful crime in Chicago, the Children's Bureau report commended the principle established with its boys' court.

Commenting that all but two States have juvenile courts for children under 16, the report added that "the feeling is developing that treatment different from the usual criminal proceedings should be extended to young people of the next age group."

The following summary was made of 972 cases selected for study, by sampling at set intervals the general run of the boys' court:

Violations of liquor laws constituted 1.1 per cent of the charges.

Queen Attends Church In Limehouse District

London, March 30 (A.P.).—Queen Mary went into the heart of London's dock-land, down by Limehouse, yesterday, attending the dedication of a new church by the Bishop of Chelmsford.

Her visit was a surprise to all but a few, but within an hour after it was known she was coming the whole of the drab area was given a festive air by hastily placed flags and decorations. The queen entered the church through an honor guard of boys drawn up in two ranks. Behind the youngsters were hundreds of street traders who had left their Saturday afternoon stalls and and pushcarts to greet her majesty.

ister, as exploratory only and promised that Italy would be called in if they got anywhere. He explained to Signor Grandi Anglo-French disputes over articles eleven and sixteen of the covenant, and rival arguments about annexes of the Locarno treaties in which it said that each power would act against an aggressor in accordance with its military resources and geographical position.

Signor Grandi, it is understood, replied that Italy, unlike France, is not asking guarantees, but that if Italy is asked to give guarantees and should decide to do so, this would more than ever necessitate naval and military parity with France.

STIMSON CONSIDERS NEW KIND OF TREATY

the armed forces to be used to protect the covenants of the league.

"The members of the league agree further that they will mutually support one another in the financial and economic measures which are taken under this article, in order to minimize the loss and inconvenience resulting from the above measures, and that they will mutually support one another in resisting any special measures aimed at one of their number by the covenant-breaking state, and that they will take the necessary steps to afford passage through their territory of the forces of any of the members of the league which are cooperating to protect the covenants of the league."

The French want certain changes in this article, or, an interpretation of its purport by the British which will assure added security to France when the next war comes. Recommendation by the council that effective military, naval and economic steps be taken against the covenant-breaking state is not enough for France, because this after all leaves the British free to ignore the recommendations or to use her influence with the league council and prevent the recommendations which France may desire. France wants Great Britain to pledge unqualifiedly military and naval support to France, which can be done, M. Briand suggests, merely by giving a new interpretation to the language of article XVI of the covenant.

U. S. Would Not Supply Troops.

America would not be asked to supply military or naval force to assist Europe in making war on a covenant-breaking state. There would, of course, be no mention of the league covenant in any political pact which the American delegation would sign if it follows Secretary Stimson's leadership.

But the signers of the covenant are the signers of the Kellogg pact to preserve peace by repudiating war as an instrument of antional policy. Therefore, a covenant-breaking state would, ipso facto, be a violator of the Kellogg pact and in each class of cases the nation or nations which oppose future programs of the leading European powers will be the violators.

There could obviously be no case where Great Britain or France or the controlling powers violating the covenant or the pact in any future controversies, because these controlling powers have the right to decide which nation or nations are the violators. If the controlling powers found it to their advantage to wage even a war of aggression against another power or group of powers, the victims of this aggression would naturally be classified as covenant-breaking states or as violators of the Kellogg antiwar treaty.

Two Nations Could Run Europe.

An Anglo-French agreement, based on article 16 of the covenant, would provide France with security and result in placing control of European affairs, if not world affairs, in the hands of Great Britain and France, if these powers could be assured that America would not have to be reckoned with in the future. America's absence from the League of Nations and fro many alliance with EEurope, makes it impossible to control America's future course of action.

But if America could be persuaded to sign a political treaty under which America became linked with the controlling European powers in advance of the next war, the advantage to Europe would be well worth sacrifice of naval tonnage. It would make little difference how mild or apparently harmles sthe political alliance would be.

A moral alliance, so called, or an agreement to cooperate "by peaceful means," or a pledge by America to consult with the league members, would accomplish the chief purpose of the league's controlling powers. It would be an assurance that America would be wit hthem, or on their side, in the next war, and this is one of the results which Europe has been striving for since the first days of the league covenant.

EXCURSION BOAT HIT; TWO DEAD, 12 HURT

286 SEIZED WITH PANIC

St. Helens, Oreg., March 30 (A.P.).—Two persons were killed and twelve were injured seriously when the excursion boat Swan, returning to Vancouver, Wash., with 286 passengers from Longview, was rammed head on off St. Helens, on the Columbia River early today by the coastwise steamer Davenport. Four persons were missing and possibly were drowned.

The dead: Mrs. J. E. Hagedorn, Vancouver, and J. E. Larson, florist, Vancouver.

The missing: Richard Belland, jr., Portland, son of Capt. Belland, owner of the excursion boat; Jack Mitchell, deck hand on the tug Dix; Sergt. R. G. Anderson, bandman, Seventh Infantry, Vancouver Barracks, home in Ohio, and Mrs. G. E. Lundy, Vancouver.

The river boat Swan, towed by the tug Dix, was en route to Vancouver from the dedication of the Longview bridge which spans the Columbia River. It left Vancouver early Saturday and after spending the day at the Longview festivities began the return trip.

Panic Seizes Passengers.

Darkness overtook the craft just after leaving Longview and the crash with the Davenport came without warning at the height of the merry-making aboard. A woman first saw the schooner and screamed, but the Davenport's prow splintered the Swan's deck planking and threw dozens of persons who were leaning on the rails into the water.

The Davenport crew rescued most of those overboard. The pleasure boat drifted downstream, where it lodged on a sand bar. The tug sank.

Panic seized the 286 passengers aboard when the crash collapsed the forepart of the Swan. The barge took a sudden dangerous list and water washed over the lower deck. There was a mad scramble for the stairs to higher decks and many were trampled in the rush for safety.

Inquiry Set for Today.

Versions of the collision varied. R. J. Belland, captain and owner of the Swan, said "I know my lights were in order and my lookout was not in the wrong. We did not see the Davenport until she was upon us and then it was too late."

William Nielson, captain of the Davenport, said: "I was in my bunk when we struck. All I can say is that our lights are standard and our crew competent to handle the ship in any emergency."

Capt. Frank X. Edthofer and John E. Wyne, Federal steam vessel inspectors, said an investigation of the collision would be started tomorrow. They said the first step would be the taking of depositions by licensed officers of the two crafts.

"Penny Postman" Claimed by eDath

D. E. Brewer Succumbs at John Dickson Home; Rites Tomorrow.

Daniel E. Brewer, 84 years old, the last surviving "penn postman," who died Saturday at the John Dickson home, 5000 Fourteenth street northwest, will be buried tomorrow morning in Congressional Cemetery, following services at Wright's funeral chapel at 10:30 o'clock.

He was one of ten letter carriers appointed in 1863 by Postmaster General Montgomery Blair. The city was divided into districts with a carrier for each. The term "penny postman" was used because the Government paid no salary but allowed the carrier to collect a penny for each letter delivered.

Mr. Brewer delivered in an area which now embraces the entire southwest section and has sixteen routes. His deliveries were made with a horse and buggy. He retired from the Government service in 1920. He is survived by a nephew, Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, of the Navy general board.

13 Cities Vote Wet In Digest's Ballot

Philadelphia Gives Large Majority for Repeal; Marion, Ohio, Dry.

New York, March 30 (N.Y.W.N.S.) Thirteen important cities, stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific, are all voting wet in the Literary Digest poll, it was indicated by incomplete returns. In Philadelphia, only 11,405 out of 74,163 voting favored enforcement. There were 44,603 for repeal and 18,155 for modification.

Plattsburgh, N. Y., a much smaller city, which is close to the lanes followed by international rum runners, also showed a surprisingly large majority against enforcement. The score there was: Enforcement, 89; modification, 250; repeal, 299. The dryest of the thirteen cities turned out to be Marion, Ohio, home of the late President Harding. Even Marion, however, showed a majority for either repeal or modification.

Voting to date in the thirteen cities follows:

POLICE EXPERIENCE DESCRIBED BY WIFE

A good husband, he is, too, always working and telling me everything. I knew that he could not have been in trouble and that perhaps he was being detained by some persons.

"I hardly slept a wink all night. In fact I didn't sleep at all. At 8 in the morning Ben came home and I told him of my experience and he told me of what happened to him. He said that he didn't believe that the men were detectives so he eluded them and went to my brother's house (Benjamin Brooks, 725 Park road northwest) and spent the night.

"My husband and I went to the Fourth Precinct, and a lieutenant told him that he was not wanted. That's all I know."

Exhausted by Worry.

Friedman, an automobile junk dealer, was sound asleep when the reporter called.

"He's all tired out from worry," Mrs. Friedman said. "And while I was worried, too, now that I think of it, it seems funny for any one to have though that my husband would run away if he had an accident."

The policemen of the Fourth Precinct who were investigating the case were Detective R. J. Barrett and John Auffenberg.

America May Soon Wrest Honors From Europa Glover Indicates.

BUILDING PROGRAM CITED

(Associated Press.)

The prediction that "one of the giants of the new Merchant Marine of the United States will soon wrest the blue pennant from the present 'Queen of the North Atlantic,'" was made yesterday by Assistant Postmaster General Glover, in commenting on the speed achievements of the Europa and the Bremen.

"Hats off to the gallant Europa of the North German Lloyd Steamship Line on her wonderful performance in crossing the Atlantic in four days, 17 hours and 6 minutes," Mr. Glover said.

"But slip them back quietly to be ready to take them off again to one of the giants built by the brains and brawn of American workmen in the shipyards of America under the terms of Jones-White act administered by Postmaster General Brown.

Mr. Glover pointed out that in the awards by the Postmaster General of ocean mail contracts, a new ship building program was projected. The first new ships of a huge building program by the American Export Corporation, Mr. Glover said, will be launched from the Camden, N. J., yards on June 6.

"The Postmaster General is now considering the establishment of several essential trade routes, all new in the trade routes of the world," he said. "Who knows but that the Pacific Coast will find itself, at least well fortified by a great merchant fleet to meet all foreign competitors, new cargo and passenger ships with speed and accommodations of which any nation can be proud?"

Level Lands in Iowa Attributed to Glaciers

Iowa City, Iowa, March 29 (A.P.).—Whatever built the State of Iowa originally, it was ice which smoothed it off finally to its present fertile levels. Five times, in as many different glacial periods, ice came sliding over Iowa, cutting, gouging, but in the main leveling says Dr. George F. Kay, of the University of Iowa.

Wind blown dust and sand helped in the leveling process between glacial periods. All this took probably hundreds of thousands and possibly millions of years, Dr. Kay says.

Pet Store Sued By Fever Victim

Woman Claims Parrot She Bought There Gave Her Psittacosis.

Baltimore, March 30 (N.Y.W.N.S.). Mrs. Florence Smith, alleging that she contracted psittacosis from two parrots she purchased, today filed suit in city court against the Dog and Cat Drug Stores, Inc., Dr. Eugene Foster and Dr. Nelson Whitehill. She asked $25,000 damages.

According to the declaration, Mrs. Smith bought a parrot from the concern December 23. The following day the bird became ill and she took it back to the store. The two veterinarians, Mrs. Smith charged, told her it had a slight cold. Several hours after Mrs. Smith had taken the bird back to her home it died. She later became ill.

Haverstraw, N. Y., March 30 (A.P.). Mrs. Evelyn Singer, of Spring Valley has applied for workmen's compensation on the ground she contracted parrot fever while at her work. She is employed in a store, she said, and one of her duties was to take care of a parrot. Recently, she added, the parrot became ill and a short time later so did she.

MORE JUDGES URGED TO AID PROHIBITION

Enforcement Group's Plan Would Not Bring Relief, Is Belief.

PREPARE HEARING DATA

(Associated Press.)

Doubt that legislation recommended by the Law Enforcement Commission to broaden powers of the United States commissioners to handle minor liquor cases would bring about desired relief in congested Federal courts was expressed yesterday by Representative Christopherson (Republican), South Dakota, who is sponsoring the measure in the House.

An increase in the number of Federal judges in courts having crowded dockets, he said, would result in speeding up justice without Congress becoming involved in a question of constitutionality by broadening the commissioners' powers.

Mr. Christopherson declared the judiciary committee was of a divided opinion on the bill, however, not only as to constitutionality, but as to whether it would actually bring about relief in the Federal courts.

The measure would provide that a Federal judge review the report of the commissioner handling a case, and would give the defendant the right to ask for a trial by a jury.

The procedure under the Wickersham plan, Mr. Christopherson said, might result in added court congestion and the subsequent delay in justice.

If the Wickersham recommendation were discharged, the South Dakotan added, the committee probably would recommend legislation to provide for additional judges in the districts where congestion is most acute, particularly in New York, Kentucky and in the District of Columbia.

"Appointment of additional Federal judges," Mr. Christopherson continued, "should not be considered as a temporary expedience to meet the problem of handling prohibition cases, because the business in Federal courts is on the increase. Should the prohibition cases slacken, the continued growth in Federal court business would keep busy the additional judges, who would be appointed for lifetime service."

The House Judiciary Committee will consider the Commissioners bill Thursday, after the dry forces conclude the presentation on Wednesday of their witnesses in the prohibition hearings, which have been under way since January.

The prohibitionists plan to conclude their argument with F. Scott McBride, general secretary of the Anti-Saloon League, as the leading witness. After a two-week recess the judiciary committee will listen to rebuttal testimony from the wets, Pierre S. DuPont, of Wilmington, Del., is again to take the stand for the advocates of repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

In the meantime, the Senate lobby investigating committee is preparing to inquire into the activities of both wet and dry organizations, including the Methodist Board of Temperance, the Antisaloon League and the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. Senator Robinson (Republican), Indiana, plans to call John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, to inquire whether he has any connection with the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

Representative Tinkham (Republican), Massachusetts, who requested the Senate lobby committee to look into the Methodist Board of Temperance and the Antisaloon League, probably will be one of the first witnesses to be called.

Attorney General Mitchell is scheduled to appear before the Senate judiciary committee within a few days to express his views on the Norris resolution calling for an investigation into prohibition enforcement. A Senate judiciary subcommittee will also open hearings this week on the Williamson bill to transfer prohibition enforcement from the Treasury to the Justice Department.

In discussing the bill to broaden the commissioners' powers, Mr. Christopherson said:

"I believe the judiciary committee will recognize the necessity for relief in Federal courts and will ultimately work out either a plan for hearings of minor liquor cases before the commissioners, in line with the Wickersham commission's recommendations or will recommend the appointment of additional judges in districts where congestion is most acute."

"It must be recognized," Mr. Christopherson continued, "that Congress has in late years enacted many laws which have greatly increased Federal court business. Not only the prohibition laws, but the national motor vehicle theft act, immigration and narcotic statutes and many laws affecting interstate commerce have increased Federal court business. The growing population also is a factor.

"We must recognize the changing conditions, and increase our Federal judiciary from time to time to meet them. With the added volume of business daily finding its way into the Federal courts, we must realize that they can not be efficent unless they keep up with the current docket."

Although the prohibition cases might decrease, the argument that the judges would have life long jobs, he said, could be met with the contention that the growth of Federal court business would keep them busy, and would justify appointment of additional judges.

ON HONOR ROLL

MRS. ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY.

FORMER STAGE STAR DEAD AFTER PLUNGE

Injuries of Allyn King, Once Ziegfeld Beauty, Fatal in New York Leap.

BREAKDOWN AFTER DIET

New York, March 30 (A.P.).—Allyn King, Southern beauty who became a Follies star, died in Bellevue Hospital today from injuries suffered yesterday when she jumped from a window of her bedroom on the fifth floor of an apartment house.

Miss King had suffered a nervous breakdown, relatives said, as a result of continued dieting to keep the slim figure demanded by the stage. She had been a patient in a private sanitarium for nearly three years. About eighteen months ago she left the sanitarium apparently much improved, and resumed the study of voice, hoping to return to the stage.

The daughter of a physician in Winston-Salem, N. C., she went on the stage when she was 17. One of Ziegfeld's scouts found her singing in a cafe in New Haven, Conn., and she entered the "Follies of 1916." Her rise was rapid and she became prima donna in the "Follies of 1922." She played the lead in "Florida Girl," "Ladies' Night" and "Out in the Night," a Chicago production. At the time of her breakdown she had a contract with the Shuberts.

She was at one time reported engaged to Carl Wiedman, wealthy Kentucky brewer and owner of the noted race horse, In Memoriam, which once beat Zev.

MISSION TRIO HELD IN NEW CHINA RAID

TWO WOMEN ARE TAKEN

Shanghai, March 30 (A.P.).—The British North China Daily News correspondent at Changsha, Hunan province, reported today that Kiangsi province bandits had captured three more foreign missionaries, two women and a man, at Yuanchow, Western Kiangsi. Three others, two women and a man, it was reported, escaped by fleeing into the mountains.

The bandits, the correspondent said, considered to be the same ones who on February 3 carried off and presumably murdered three Finnish missionaries, raided Yuanchow and after looting the city carried off the three representatives of the British China Inland Mission.

Those Captured by Bandits.

Those captured were the Rev. and Mrs. R. W. Porteus, of England, who have been in China for almost a quarter of a century, and Miss N. E. Gemmell, an American. Miss Gemmell has been in China since 1919.

The dispatch said those who escaped were two British missionaries and one American, the Rev. R. H. Glazier. They fled into the mountains of western Kiangsi Province, and their immediate whereabouts were unknown.

The whereabouts of the captured trio, the correspondent said, were also a mystery and, although missionaries of the district have searched throughout the region, thus far they have not found which direction the brigands are moving. Headquarters of the mission are at Germantown, Pa.

Near Kanchow, Where 16 Are Held.

Yuanchow is approximately 150 miles northwest of Kanchow, Kiangsi, where 16 American Catholic missionaries were believed still held.

Inability to communicate with Kanchow or other towns of the northern part of the province because of bandit interference with telegraphic facilities, has made it impossible to determine their safety.

Despite reports that Communists and bandits have been dispersed at Kanchow, no confirmation has been possible and fear for the safety of the missionaries was held.

Brickbats & Bouquets

—By JAMES HAY, JR.—

WHY can't they let Senator Smoot spend the evening of his days in that embattled calm which he so adores? Why are they forever trying to dress him up like Carrie Nation or Joan of Arc and send him out to win a crusade or abolish a pest?

There he was, happy and pugilistic in his customary pursuit of protecting infant industries, when somebody came along and whispered into his long-suffering ear that off-color books were "rooining" the boys and girls of the land.

* * * *

CEASING a moment his miraculous deftness in discovering more infant industries than anybody else could find among the ancient and prosperous factories of the republic, he struck a blow against obscene literary importations, incidentally piling his desk high with examples of the awful stuff and thereby furnishing fellow senators with a lot of exciting reading.

No sooner does he emerge from that historic battle of the books than the Anticigarette Alliance of Washington holds a meeting, elects new officers and announces that it will support Mr. Smoot's efforts to put cigarettes under the pure food and drug act.

* * * *

THIS, however, comes under the head of belated activity. Months ago, when the senator from Utah was all lashed into a frenzy of indignation by certain cigarette manufacturers putting out "insidious advertising" tempting boys and girls to use their wares, he did introduce a bill to subject the makers of women's most popular smokes to the exactions and requirements of the pure food and drug law.

But since then, the Federal Trade Commission has attended to the "insidious advertising" to which he so heatedly objected, statements that if a boy wanted to grow up vigorous and a girl mightily desired to become beautiful, it would do them no harm to smoke cigarettes, and stuff to that effect.

Moreover, the Smoot cigarette bill died a natural death on March 4, and, so far as can be discovered, the senator, having gained his objective, has no intention of reintroducing the measure.

* * * *

ALL of which strikes the casual observer as fair enough. Mr. Smoot is not as young as he used to be, and what with coalitions threatening his pet tariff schedules one day and voting for them the next he has been living in a swirl of such confusion, fights and feints that he is entitled to at least a brief time off from reforming the younger generation right away and the wide, wide world ultimately.

Besides, when the senator first came to Washington he was so unkindly assailed by fanatical reformers that it is difficult to understand why or how he could make common cause with them now.

His real job is constructive and upward reforming, the business of saving infant industries. As a Carrie Nation in behalf of the sophisticated flapper and the cynical sheik, he would be out of his element.

NAVY OPPOSES BILL TO RETIRE AVIATOR

Acting Secretary Jahncke Sees Blow to Morale in Williams Case.

SAYS ACT UNWARRANTED

(Associate Press.)

The Navy Department is opposed to legislation pending before the House naval committee to retire Lieut. Alford J. Williams, noted speed and acrobatic aviator, with the rank of captain, because to single him out would "be a severe blow to naval morale."

Chairman Britten, of the House naval committee, was advised by Acting Secretary Jahncke in a letter made public yesterday that "in the opinion of the Navy Department there is no justifiable warrant for placing Lieut. Williams on the retired list."

Williams resigned, effective May 8, when he was ordered to sea duty, following his failure last year to get his privately built mercury racer in condition for the Schneider cup races in England. He gave as his reasons his desire to develop speed planes. The Navy Department revoked the order sending him to sea, and accepted his resignation.

Enlisted in November, 191

Representative Fitzgerald (Republican), Ohio, introduced a bill to retire Williams with the rank of captain and with retired pay and allowances.

Britten asked the Navy for a report on the measure after a review of Williams' record, which shows he enlisted November 10, 1917, and later earned a commission. Jahncke wrote that a study of Williams' service career showed that he had "specialized in individual flight and in racing."

Wakeful Bride Ruins Plot To Land $20,000 in Cognac

Woman Telephones Deputy Port Surveyor That Noise of Loading Trucks Prevents Her Sleeping and Seven Are Captured in Resulting Raid.

New York, March 30 (A.P.).—The rumbling of heavily laden liquor trucks along the roads of Woodbridge, N. J., which disturbed the slumbers of a honeymoon couple, led to the arrest early today at Keasbey, N. J., of seven alleged rumrunners and the seizure of 200 cases of cognac, valued by Federal agents at $100 a case.

Early this morning, John H. McGill, deputy surveyor of the Port of New York in charge of enforcement, received a telephone call from the bride, whose name he withheld, informing him that she and her husband were unable to sleep because of the noise of the trucks.

An automobile full of inspectors immediately started from New York and soon located twenty men unloading the cognac cargo from a motor boat at a pier in Keasbey. A large van stood ready to receive the liquor.

The inspectors advanced to the attack just as a red warning light flashed on the pierhead. The boat shot away downstream with bullets striking her stern and the alleged rumrunners on shore scattered, but the inspectors managed to capture seven of them.

The prisoners, all from New Jersey, were brought to the barge office here for questioning by Treasury agents.

Deputy Surveyor McGill said the cognac seized was of the highest quality taken in a raid by customs agents here in several years.

Fast Plane Brings Byrd Photos North

Lee Schoenhair Is Rushing Pictures and Films From Panama.

Managua, Nicaragua, March 30 (A.P.).—Lee Schoenhair, bringing the pictorial record of the Byrd Antarctic expedition from Panama to Newark Airport, N. J., in his speedy airplane, Miss Silvertown, landed here this afternoon. Owing to reports of bad weather over Honduras he decided to remain overnight.

Schoenhair left France Field, Canal Zone, at 7:58 a. m., after receiving the photographs and motion picture films of the Byrd expedition from Willard Vandeveer, official photographer for the Paramount News with the expedition, who arrived by the steamer Tamaroa at Panama yesterday.

The pictures are being rushed to the United States by airplane especially for the Associated Press, the New York Times and Paramount News.

Aviatrix Thrown Out of Airplane

Mildred Kauffman Lands Safely by Parachute After Air Mishap.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 30 (A.P.).—Mildred Kauffman, Kansas City aviatrix and holder of the woman's world record of 46 inside loops, escaped with a few slight scratches and bruises after she was catapulted from her plane at a height of 3,200 feet today at the Buffalo Airport. She was attempting to break her own record. She landed safely with the aid of her parachute while the plane crashed to earth, its motor wide open. The accident was witnessed by several thousand persons.

Miss Kauffman said she was making the thirty-first loop when she was thrown from the cockpit as the ship went into a partial stall. Helplessly, she dangled upside down from the plane with her feet caught in the safety strap. After several attempts to right the craft and climb back, the diminutive aviatrix kicked herself free and pulled the parachute cord.

Franchise Is Given Women of Turkey

Author Says 99 Per Cent of Them Don't Know What It's About.

Istanbul, Turkey, March 30 (A.P.).—The Angora parliament today passed the law giving women the right to vote in municipal elections and making them eligable to hold office as municipal counsellors and presidents of municipalities. The newspaper Milliett, government organ, in Angora, says that in 1932 the government will give women the full franchise with the right to sit in parliament.

Milliett said that Turkish women's ability was one of the most important factors in the nation's progress, and the enfranchising law effaced the last vestige of the old regime's tyranny and ignorance.

On the other hand, the Turkish woman author, Kadrie Reshad, published a statement asserting that 99 per cent of the Turkish women had no idea what the suffrace movement was all about.

Pistol Bullet Pierces Man's Body, Kills Wife

Dallas, Tex., March 30 (A.P.).—Struck by a pistol bullet after it had passed through the shielding body of her husband, Mrs. Tony Tordora, 26, was killed by a negro robber last night in the Tordora grocery and market. Tordora's wound was not serious. Five children also survive.

The bullet from the Negro's gun struck Mrs. Tordora in the forehead after passing through her husband's shoulder. The Negro got less than $3 from the store's cash register. The Negro escaped.

Kansas Airplane Pilot Dies in 2,500-Foot Fall

Hutchinson, Kans., March 30 (A.P.).—C. R. Moore, pilot for the Baby Ace Airplane Co. at Wichita, Kans., was killed at Albright Field near here this afternoon in a plane crash. His ship fell 2,500 feet in a tail spin.

Moore was said by field attendants to have complained of illness before the flight and was urged not to take the air. He insisted on going up, however, in order not to disappoint a crowd which had gathered for the demonstration of the small one-place plane.

Four Blindfold Driver; Steal $35,000 Silk Load

Perth Amboy, N. J., March 30 (N. Y.W.N.S.).—Theft of a $35,000 truckload of silk was reported to police here last night by Peter Foster, 30, of Jefferson City, driver of the truck which, he said, was taken away from him in Jersey City by four men, who forced him into their automobile, and after a long drive abandoned him, blindfolded, in the highway just outside Perth Amboy.

Foster, employed by the Universal Car Loading & Distributing Co., of New York, reported the holdup occurred in Johnson avenue. Officials of the trucking concern said their men had been instructed not to use Johnson avenue because of the likelihood of a holdup on that out-of-the-way street.

CHAPTER IX—WHY I DO THOSE THINGS.

My voice is not strong and is essentially adapted to the microphone where no effort is involved. Therefore, in order that it receive some impetus in the theater, I have found a megaphone to be absolutely essential, especially when we consider that the great cathedrals of today, seating 3,000 and sometimes 4,000 people, were not built for the natural reception of a soft voice like mine.

One of the main disadvantages of the megaphone is that it detracts from the visual effect by hiding the face. The complaints I have heard on this score furnish another proof that the eye must see what is going on. This seems absurd when, after all, I am singing, and that singing is performed expressly for the ear. And yet the selfish eye must have its share of the entertainment and demands that it also have a share in everything that is going on. Instead of sitting back, relaxing and listening to the voice alone, which, after all, is the proper way to enjoy a vocal rendition, so many people feel very unhappy when they can not see the face from which the sound is issuing.

I am looking forward to the day when I play musical comedy, as all musical comedy in New York is played in small theaters, where the slightest whisper is audible to the back row.

I was happy while I was making my picture because the microphones were so arranged that I could sing normally and easily without a note being lost, and yet the selfish eye is not slighted during my part of the picture, but may see all, at the same time the ear is satisfied.

Of course showmanship may be exemplified in other ways. The arrangement of a well-balanced program with every number calculated to please some one in the average mixed audience—this is just as much an act of showmanship as is the presentation of the numbers.

I doubt if my boys can ever realize just the responsibility that has rested on my shoulders in our numerous auditions and tryouts. When I knew that mine it was to make or break the band. They have never realized just how fast I had to think sometimes when we have had 15 minutes to impress a group of overbored individuals whose interest would be completely lost by an unwise choice of tunes. I am very happy that we have never failed in any of our auditions.

Superstitions About Auditions.

We are superstitious about our auditions, having begun the first two or three with a tune well calculated to arrest the attention of those listening. This tune is "My Time Is Your Time." Beginning it with clarinets in the low register brings a soothing sensation that is very agreeable and pleasant to hear.

Again in the presentation of our little comedy numbers, I have bowed to showmanship and have tried to present them in as genuine and spontaneous a way as possible. In fact, rather than present a comedy number artificially, forcing a smile from tired faces, I would omit it and just continue playing music.

Fortunately I have youth to work with, and it has been very rarely, indeed, that my boys have not felt like entering into the spirit of a number, for which I can be duly thankful.

I have neglected to mention a physical asset of showmanship which is worth a million dollars to the one who has it, and that is, a genuine smile. Many an individual with very little ability, either vocally, instrumentally or otherwise, has had a smile which has been greatly responsible for the devotion of a large number of fans. Caricatures of the smiles of Harold Lloyd, Paul Ash, and numerous other persons will testify as to the wonderful drawing power of the smile.

You may object and say that this is personality, not showmanship. But showmanship is nothing more nor less than personality and each is bound up in the other; only that showmanship is possibly just a little exaggerated personality.

People have often asked me to smile more frequently in my stage presentation work, but they forget that I am usually so tired, with only four or five hours' sleep after twenty hours of steady mental and physical effort, that a smile would be unnatural and forced; and I have always preferred to be my natural self when in the spotlight, even at the risk of being termed blase or tired looking.

Finds His Smiles Come Easily.

Fortunately, as a general thing, a smile with me comes spontaneously and naturally, and even when most tired I find smiling an easy thing to do.

I think there is nothing worse than an artificial stretching of the lips over the teeth into a forced smile. It is laughable indeed to watch some of the acts as they take their bows on the stage. The minute they are in the wings and lost to the sight of the audience their faces assume their natural expressions, usually serious and tired, and (when the applause is not up to their expectations) very angry. And then you see an almost unbelievable lightning transformation as they set an artificial smile upon their faces, in the flash of a second, to return for another bow.

No, I may be odd, but I prefer to take my bows with a natural expression, regardless of what it is, because I believe in the maxim, "Be yourself!"

Closely identified with showmanship, in fact practically part of showmanship (and vice versa), is what the professional terms "hokum;" that is, something to amuse, to attract the eye and to tickle the sense of humor. Very few dance orchestras really use hokum at all, or at least to any extent, and most of those that do use it put it in either between dances or at intermission.

A few, however, were wise enough to realize that as the couple dance around there is very little to occupy their minds unless they are engaged in conversation. Usually I find that the fellow and girl do not converse as they dance; rather does the eye seek something to engage its attention. Of course, one may watch the other couples, or those on the side lines, or the orchestra.

I firmly believe that the dance orchestra will never be replaced by any form of mechanical music, regardless of how lifelike the mechanical orchestra may be.

That is where hokum comes in. The band that can put on little skits and comedy numbers with props and apparatus while the crowd is dancing has a tremendous edge on dance orchestras that simply produce beautiful, rhythmic music. Such an orchestra may rightly be termed an entertaining orchestra because they engage the eye while they entice the feet to dance and soothe the mind with music.

After the success of our first comedy number I saw that we had the ingredients for a "hokum" band as well as a "sweet" band, and proceeded to develop this side of our work.

The tenth instalment will appear tomorrow.

Rome Observes Laetare Sunday

Pope Blesses Golden Rose, Which May Be Bestowed Upon Queen Helena.

Rome, March 30 (A.P.).—Laetare Sunday, the joyful feast in the ecclesiastical calendar that corresponds to the Mi-Careme or Media Quaresima, which the laity celebrated last Thursday, was commemorated today with due pomp in all Rome's churches, in the Vatican City, and generally throughout the Catholic world.

In the Vatican City the Pope himself performed the nearly 1,000-year-old ceremony of blessing the golden rose with incense and holy water, thereafter pouring balsam and musk into the cup formed by the fragile petals. The flower of precious metal was then carried in solemn procession to the sacristy of the Pope's private chapel.

Later it will be bestowed on some Catholic sovereign, presumably upon Queen Helena of Italy, in view of the conciliation effected between church and state, or upon some famous church as a sign of the pontiff's devotion.

Glee Club Closes Season's Program

Georgetown University Presents Its Annual Mi-Careme Concert.

The Georgetown University Glee Club made its final appearance of the Lenten season last night in its annual Mi-Careme concert before an enthusiastic audience in Gaston Hall.

Under the direction of Prof. Edward P. Donovan, the club presented a varied program of seventeen pieces, including a number of violin and piano solos. Most of the numbers were chosen from the song hits of the season's repertoire. William McLarney, president of the club, and William Hoffman, pianists, and Charles Burkett, violinist, scored in individual numbers.

The program opened with "Veni Creator," a Gregorian chant, by the Glee Club and included a Christmas hymn of the fourteenth century. Among the popular numbers were several Negro folk songs.

POLICEMAN SLASHED BY PRISONER IN AUTO

Man, Not Searched, Pulls Out Knife After Being Put Under Arrest.

IS HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Neglecting to search a Negro prisoner found staggering on the Colesville pike near Ashton, Md., while on a hurry call, Policeman Joseph Nolte, 30 years old, attached to the Silver Spring substation of the Montgomery County police, was attacked and severely slashed across the back of the neck by the man early yesterday a few minutes after the arrest.

The Negro gave his name as Charles Cook, 30 years old, of Ashton. He was lodged in the Rockville Jail on charges of being drunk and disorderly and held for action of the grand jury in connection with the assault on the policeman.

Receiving a call to investigate a case on the pike, Nolte and Sergt. Guy L. Jones were proceeding on the road when, in turning the curve they almost ran into Cook, who lurched into the path of the car. They took him in custody on a charge of intoxication, placing him in a rear seat alone while they sat together in the front seat.

A few moments later, they said, the Negro almost caused a wreck when he flung his arms around the neck of Sergt. Jones, at the wheel. Nolte shoved the man back to the seat and had turned to the front when Cook, according to their report, whipped out a pocketknife and slashed Nolte across the back of the neck from ear to ear. Lesser injuries were inflicted by Cook in two other lunges, they said, before Sergt. Jones could stop the car, open the rear door and fell the man with the butt of his pistol.

Nolte was rushed to the Montgomery County Hospital at Sandy Spring, where 25 stitches were taken. He was reported in a serious condition.

REPUBLICAN LEADER FLAYS DEMOCRATS to many thousands of skilled workers, and along with the construction program of public utilities and other private enterprise will continue to augment the improvement already noticeable in the employment situation."

After eight years of delay, Representative Tilson said, the farm relief bill was passed last June along the lines recommended by President Hoover. He added:

"This legislation has already brought help and courage to agriculture. An illustration of the effective assistance the Farm Board is able to render agriculture was shown by the prompt action of the board in the recent embryo wheat panic, which, if left alone, might have precipitated a major disturbance in commodity prices generally."

The public roads bill would permit the States to extend road construction with greater Federal aid, he said, and would be a move toward relieving unemployment. The radio and reapportionment measures were held up as outstanding accomplishments and Representative Tilson cited the creation of the commission to study the policy toward Haiti as another.

Within a brief period Representative Tilson added, the Haitian commission had completed its study and President Hoover had proclaimed a new policy.

"Under this policy," the leader said, "there will be a gradual withdrawal of the marines from Haiti with United States intervention in Haitian affairs limited definitely to those activities for which provision is made for American assistance by treaty or by specific agreement between the two governments, and a complete withdrawal at the end of the treaty made in 1915, which expires in 1936."

OTTERBEIN GLEE CLUB MEMBERS

The Otterbein College Men's Glee Club, which will appear in a concert tonight at the Memorial United Brethren Church, North Capitol and R streets.

GLEE CLUB TO GIVE ORIGINAL NUMBERS

Otterbein College Program Will Be Featured by New Songs.

WIDELY VARYING TYPES

A number of the songs sung by the Otterbein College Men's Glee Club when it appears here tonight at the Memorial United Brethren Church, North Capitol and R streets, will never be heard elsewhere in the same arrangement, as they are written especially for the club by Prof. A. R. Spessard, director.

The opening number on the program is written in its entirety by Spessard, as are all the encores used. "Time To Go," by Sanderson, is sung in Spessard's arrangement, as is "Casey the Fiddler," the latter with violin obligato and a reading.

"Darling Nelly Gray," written by Benjamin Hanby, a graduate of Otterbein, has been arranged for the men's voices, featuring a violin solo part. From among the modern songs, "Sunny Side Up" is sung, with a special arrangement of both words and music.

In addition there are a number of college songs sung in special versions by the director. While maintaining a high standard throughout the hour and three quarters of entertainment, the glee club includes selections of widely varying types.

Among the classical composers whose numbers appear on the program are Rachmaninoff, Chopin, and Schubert. The Russian genius is represented by "Creation Hymn" in an arrangement by Bornschein. O'Hare's version of "All the World's Asleep" is from the pen of Chopin. "Who Is Sylvia" also represents the third named composer. "Drums," by Meale, in an arrangement by Salter, has proven a favorite with the club in past years, as has the "Cowboy Song," by Russell.

The program is varied further by the inclusion of the banjo orchestra numbers, comprising one-third of the evening's music. Piano solos from among Chopin's waltzes, and a Spanish dance as a violin solo are high spots.

Injuries Are Fatal To Victim of Auto

Driver Released on Bond Following Accident on Rockville Pike.

F. L. Follansbee, 60, of 121 Second street northwest, died at the Montgomery General Hospital yesterday morning from injuries received when he was struck by an automobile on the Rockville pike late Saturday night George Walter Poynter, Negro, of Eighth street northwest, and driver of the car which struck Follansbee, was released under bond of $1,000 shortly after the accident. Charges of reckless driving were filed against him.

According to information given the police, Follansbee was walking on the edge of the pike near the fair grounds when the car driven by Poynter ran him down. It was alleged that Poynter attempted to pass a southbound truck on the wrong side of the pike.

Follansbee was taken to the Montgomery General Hospital at Sandy Springs, Md., where examination revealed injuries to his head and chest. He died shortly before 10 o'clock yesterday morning, without regaining consciousness.

No inquest will be held.

REPORT HITS CHARGE OF JUVENILE CRIME

comprised 12.2 per cent of the whole group.

Four-fifths of all the charges were based on disorderly conduct and offenses against property.

The delinquency cases decreased numerically from 7,500 in 1915 to 5,409 in 1929, the report said. During that period, while the ratio of municipal court cases to population was trebling, the cases of boys from 17 to 20 decreased about 41 per cent in ratio to population.

Detailed studies of 82 of the young men involved in the 973 cases filled 80 pages of the report. On the basis of this human-factor study, the report recommended for older boys "such individual study and scientific treatment as constitute the basis of juvenile court work."

Highlights of the War

As Related by Veterans Themselves

Move Over, Soldier

"How come all this soldier stuff?" "Who won the war?" "Did all those he-soldier buddies swim over?"

If I remember correctly the big threat was not that an American Army could not fight, but that Von Tirpitz U-boats were to make a Yankee Army in France an impossibility. Right? The Navy put 'em over and answered Von Tirpitz by not losing a single soldier. Right?

I served on one of the little submarine chasers under seagoing Jiggy Nelson in the Adriatic. Gold chevrons for overseas service? We wore ours sea green with salt spray. One day an Austrian U-boat came up along our little tossing sub chaser. We shoved her off with a boathook and sunk her with gunfire less than 20 yards off our beam. Check up at the Navy Department and then tell the cockeyed world. Yours for saltier gobs and longer cruises.

We Can Stand It

Now let me tell a story
Of just two months' stay
In the little burg of Quincy,
This side of Vourjous.

Now it wasn't much on looks,
As you read in picture books,
Nor was it built for kings
Or princes fair.

It was just a quaint old village,
Just as quaint as can be found.
Now let's continue my story,
A-starting from the ground.

Well, we got up in the morning
Just to hear the birdies sing,
And we broke our necks a-dressin'
When we heard the chow-horn ring.

We'd burst out o' the billets,
To be the first in line,
When we'd hear the d—d ole message shout,
"Slo' up, der's plenty o' time."

Well, we'd get our share of hash,
Bread and punk coffee, too,
And then eat "toot-swee," for
We had a drill call, too.

We answered that an all the rest,
In the good old hattery way.
And that's saying a mouthful,
I'm right here to say.

The day wore on and evening came
And the mess-sarge's "hall o' fame"
Was emptied, and our time our own
Till "lights out" orders came.

Some of the boys would go to bed,
And others would oft to roam,
While others would sit and write
To the dear ones they left at home.

Now this is my little story,
In my own little way,
And I hope I haven't bored you,
So bon-soir, buddy—good day.

A Nice Lady

Metzbach was about a mile up a valley from the front line in Alsace, and visible to the Germans. In the village was a small French barb-wire factory and a number of French and American soldiers were billeted there. Yet because the natives were German at heart, the Boche artillery spared the village. Not a shell had landed there and the natives went about their business in the very midst of the terrible game of war in total disregard of danger.

On all sides of the village, however, the terrain was literally pitted with shell holes. Anyone was safe in the village but the minute the last farmhouse was passed, an allied soldier was apt to find a shell searching him out.

On a number of occasions the pack train bringing up supplies for the trenches in the middle of the night had been shelled on an exposed stretch of road on the hill back of the village. It was strange that the Germans could pick the exact place and minute that the pack train was exposed. The shellings had been destructive to men, mules, and supplies. And on many occasions the Germans seemed to have the knack of landing a shell at exactly the right time to catch troop movements.

Sergt. Tony Bates and party were making one of their periodic forages to Metzbach for wine at twilight one evening.

Approaching the village, Tony pointed to a peasant house and said, "That fellow must be having trouble with his blinds. He's jerked that up and down three times as fast as he could."

In a fraction of a minute a shell narrowly missed annihilating us. We scattered and made for protection. In thinking the thing over, Sergt. Bates ordered us with him. When it became dark we crawled up around the house and waited. About midnight we heard the rattle of the supply train. Then the shade was pulled up and lowered half way. But before the act was over, Bates with two men were in the place. They took a young woman who drew a revolver but was not quick enough. She turned out to be the peasant's daughter, but also a paid German spy.

500 OF CHURCH SEE CORNER STONE LAID

Ceremony Is Conducted by Rockville Presbyterian Congregation.

LED BY REV. H. K. PASMA

The corner stone of the Rockville Presbyterian Church was laid yesterday afternoon in the presence of over 500 members of the church and visitors from Presbyterian Churches in Washington.

The Rev. Henry K. Pasma, pastor of the church which is being built, was in charge of the service, assisted by the Rev. Dr. James H. Taylor, pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church of Washington, and Harold C. Smith, of Rockville, who is chairman of the building committee of the church.

Preceding the laying of the corner stone, the entire gathering was led in a responsive reading by the pastor. After the stone was placed, the congregation went to the Rockville Methodist Church, where Dr. Taylor preached a special sermon.

In the copper box which was sealed in the stone were placed deeds for the church building and property, copies of Washington newspapers, including The Washington Post, a clipping from the Montgomery County Sentinel of August 23, 1879, which told of the completion of the building which the congregation has just sold to the Montgomery County Commissioners, and a list of the members of the Rockville Chapter of the Kings' Daughters.

The ground where the old church stood, along with other buildings and lots in that block, has all bee bought by the Montgomery County Commissioners to be used as a site for the new Montgomery County Courthouse and Jail.

MRS. KITTY HART DIES OF SPINAL AILMENT

with several other men for the notorious holdup and fatal wounding of Charles Norris, a Baltimore banker, on a downtown street in that city. After two previous escapes from the penitentiary and subsequent captures since his incarceration at that time, Hart sawed through two of three locks on his cell door and cut around a brass lock to effect a release into the jail corridor, when he unlocked the cell door of George Bailey, serving a fifteen-year term for a hold-up.

Three hours later their disappearance was noted and Bailey was caught hiding behind a ventilator on the prison roof, and surrendered when a shot was fired at him. Bailey told authorities that Hart fastened a rope of bedclothes to the ventilator, climbed out on the roof and slid down over the eaves to the Eager street side.

HIGH MASS IS HELD IN REBUILT CHURCH

Archbishop Curley Presides at Ceremonies Held at St. Dominic.

MEMBERS ARE PRAISED

Archbishop Michael J. Curley presided at ceremonies yesterday at St. Dominic's Church attendant to the reoccupation of the edifice, which has been renovated following the fire which destroyed the interior on February 24, 1929.

In a short discourse following a soleman high mass, the archbishop encouraged the congregation in its work. The Very Rev. Dr. Ignatius Smith, of Catholic University, preached the sermon, in which he sketched the history of the church from its inception 75 years ago until the present time.

In its history, he said, the church had been destroyed twice, once in 1864 and the second time in 1929. Perseverance and faith of the congregation in each case, he said, was responsible for the rebuilding.

The Rev. Raphael M. Burke, pastor, was celebrant at the mass. His assistants were the Rev. John A. Cowan, as deacon, and the Rev. Jeremiah T. Fitzgerald, of Providence, R. I., as subdeacon. Archbishop Curley pronounced the benediction.

About 30 priests and monsignori attended the services. More than 1,000 of the congregation were present.

The entire structure has been redecorated. New frescoes were made. A marble floor supplanted the old wooden floor. A new organ was played for the first time in the services yesterday. Decoration was planned after the old Gothic style. The cost of the renovation was $125,000.

A KING'S PROMISE IS NEVER BROKEN!

Conrad III at the surrender of Weinsberg in 1140, demanded the men's execution, but permitted the women to take away as much as they could carry. Every woman came through the opened gates carrying on her back her husband or son, her brother or father! The King kept his word and set them free...Weinsberg is a charming village near the Black Forest—in that lovely panorama of mountain, lake, and woods, nature flowers to rich beauty. In Germany, the romantic past gleams in castle and town, and the Oberammergau Passion Play. The gay present enlivens great cities, health resorts, modern sports. No visé charge, modern comfort, moderate prices in golden Germany.

NATIONAL SHIP CONFERENCE.

Announcement by the Shipping Board that the third national conference on the merchant marine is to be convened in this city on April 23 comes at an opportune time, in view of important developments now taking place in the world of shipping. The marked success achieved by the two preceding national conferences has aroused widespread public interest in these annual gatherings of American steamship men and representatives of allied industries.

The passage of the Jones-White act and the appointment of President Hoover's interdepartmental committee on mail contracts have had the effect of stimulating work in American shipyards, dormant since the war, and they are now experiencing the greatest peace-time activity in their history. This building program, so beneficial from an employment standpoint, fits in admirably with the movement launched by the President to promote construction work in all the major branches of industry.

A glance at the agenda of the third national conference shows that the coming meeting, like the preceding ones, will confine its attention to the larger problems that remain to be solved before the youthful American merchant marine can hope to compete on equal terms with its older maritime rivals. Important questions of policy and methods, of marine engineering, of differentials in shipbuilding and ship operating costs, of ways of enlisting greater cooperation on the part of American shippers and land carriers—these are but a few of the broader subjects that will come before the delegates for discussion. One of the most interesting problems involves the training of officer personnel to man the many new ships that will be launched in American yards within the next few years.

The American people have awakened to the need of a strong merchant marine and Congress has reflected the popular sentiment by enacting sympathetic and helpful legislation. Thanks to the able manner in which the Shipping Board, under the leadership of Chairman O'Connor, has carried out the congressional enactments, the American flag is at last resuming its rightful place on the ocean trade-lanes of the world. The annual conferences called by the Shipping Board to formulate nation-wide policies for the marine industry are among the constructive measures that have brought about this new day for American shipping. They have developed to a point where they are filling the long-felt need for a nation-wide organization of maritime interests.

SIFTING IMMIGRANTS.

Harry E. Hull, commissioner general of immigration, advocates a policy of selecting immigrants as a means of reducing unemployment. The present policy of restriction limits the number of aliens who may settle in the United States to approximately 150,000 per year, but it permits no distinction between those aliens who are needed in the economic system and those who are not. Two million applicants are waiting in Europe to come to this country. It is not enough to put a limitation on mere numbers.

Every foreigner who comes to the United States enters into competition with American citizens. In some fields this country needs skilled workmen and experts, but in many other lines of work there is a surplus. For example, every coal miner who is admitted aggravates the unemployment problem in the coal fields. The weakness of a policy which admits the kind of workers that are not needed, and are therefore liable to become public charges, while excluding those for whom there is urgent demand, is too obvious for argument.

The United States is the only major country in the world that continues to ignore economic fitness as an essential prerequisite to the admission of immigrants. Mr. Hull points out that British citizens who are excluded by law from Canada or Australia may enter the United States with no difficulty except that of waiting their turn. Such a policy ignores the rights and welfare of American citizens.

Selective immigration is particularly applicable to the influx of workmen from other countries of this hemisphere. There would be little complaint about the flow of people over the borders if it were regulated according to economic demands. Mere regulation by numbers would not solve the problems of immigrant labor.

One other factor of vital importance is admittance of the criminal element. Precautions are taken to exclude criminals, but that provision of the law would be far more effective if only those for whom there is an economic need were admitted. Fewer newcomers would turn to crime if they were employed.

The emergency through which the country has just passed should hasten consideration of selective immigration in Congress.

MUSCLE SHOALS.

Congress will attempt again this week to dispose of the Muscle Shoals question. For nearly eleven years this problem has been before Congress, and the plants at Muscle Shoals have been idle. The problem is no nearer solution now than it was a decade ago.

Another effort will be made to enact the Norris resolution calling for Government operation of the plants. Senator Norris succeeded in driving his socialistic scheme through Congress in 1928, but President Coolidge had the good judgment to kill it with a pocket veto. In spite of this and of President Hoover's opposition to Government ownership a drive will be launched to push virtually the same resolution through Congress.

In his message to Congress President Hoover said:

> I do not favor the operation by the Government of either power or manufacturing business, except as an unavoidable by-product of some other major public purpose.
> Any form of settlement of this question (Muscle Shoals) will imply entering upon a contract or contracts for the lease of the plants, either as a whole or in parts, and the reservation of facilities, products, or income for agricultural purposes.

He recommended that a commission be authorized to negotiate such contracts on behalf of the Government. In view of this direct stand against putting the Government in competition with private business, it is unthinkable that the President would sign the Norris bill.

The Government contemplated the expenditure of $20,000,000 on Muscle Shoals in the interests of national defense, but the cost of the project has far exceeded that amount. Senator Norris proposes that additional millions be expended for experimentation, manufacture of fertilizer and power. Government operation of the plants in the interest of national defense can not be justified. Maj. Gen. Clarence C. Williams, chief of ordnance in the War Department, who is thoroughly familiar with the plants, told the House military affairs committee recently that those sections designed to produce ammonium nitrate and other materials for national defense are no longer needed. While Congress has been wrangling about the subject private industry has gone ahead and supplied most of the materials needed for national defense.

As for the manufacture of fertilizer, Gen. Williams testified that the plant is not equipped for that purpose and could not be so used without considerable expenditure. The fertilizer industry has made rapid gains in the United States since the World War. Importation of Chilean nitrates is diminishing, and if the Government leaves this new industry alone the country will not have to depend upon Chile for this essential ingredient much longer.

The American people do not look with favor upon socialistic enterprise. If Congress again tries to plunge the Government in business at Muscle Shoals the effort will be wasted. It is time for consideration of the subject from a practical standpoint. The Government will lose money no matter what disposition is made of the project, but there is no use in allowing the plants to decay in desuetude. It is up to some member of the Senate to bring forth a satisfactory plan for leasing Muscle Shoals for private operation.

WHEAT PROBLEM MORE DIFFICULT.

The Federal Farm Board, created less than a year ago, has established four huge national cooperative marketing associations to handle grain, cotton, beans, wool and mohair, has placed on loan some $80,000,000 of the Government's money, and is planning credits aggregating $200,000,000 more. To what end? The Department of Agriculture reported last week that the general level of farm prices on March 15 reached the lowest point since May, 1927. From February 15 to March 15 the level declined five points. At 126 per cent of the prewar level on March 15, the index of prices paid producers was 14 points under that of a year ago. Declines from February 15 to March 15 carried the United States average farm price of wheat to a low level for the current marketing season and to the lowest level for March 15 since 1913. At 91.9 cents per bushel, the midmonth average farm price of all wheat was approximately 9 per cent below that of February 15 and about 12 per cent below that of a year ago.

"The world-wide decline in the general commodity price level," says the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, "the reduced export demand for United States wheat, large visible supplies, and prospects for an increased carry-over into the new crop year, have had a depressing influence on wheat prices. Commercial wheat stocks in principal domestic markets on March 15 were about 24.5 per cent larger than a year ago."

It may be argued that the experiment of farm relief is only in its infancy. But the fact remains that the situation today is worse than that of a year ago and, for that matter, of a month ago, wherefore the task of the Farm Board is made more difficult. The large visible supply of wheat on hand should bring farmers and farm organizations to the realization that their cooperation in the emergency is imperative. Production must be curtailed if the carry-over is to be eased into the market.

Chairman Legge said recently in support of an appeal to farmers to curtail their acreage by 10 per cent: "If the growers cooperate the Stabilization Corporation will be justified in paying storage charges and carrying wheat for a time in the hope that a crop shortage somewhere in the world will give opportunity for unloading it." Disregarding the practical difficulties of uniting the farmers in a movement of this nature, and assuming that a short wheat year should miraculously occur, there must continually be the danger that an artifically sustained price above the market value will result disastrously. In an article from his pen appearing in Nation's Business, Mr. Legge says: "The effect of the board activities on production must be carefully watched. We will be traveling only in a vicious circle if the efforts of the board should result in a large expansion of cultivated land and the production of greater and greater supplies of our principal crops." Mr. Legge believes that the program of work through the cooperatives is the only plan that will avoid a calamity of that kind.

There is, however, the added danger that other nations will take retaliatory or protective steps. Germany and France have arranged to levy heavy duties on American farm products if an emergency develops. Brazil, where a disastrous experiment in the artificial control of coffee prices has recently been concluded, is making extensive plans to turn coffee ranches into the production of wheat.

Meanwhile, Government agencies other than the Farm Board will continue to encourage agricultural development in new areas. Mr. Legge last week expressed his opposition to the opening up of new reclamation areas, and he will have the cooperation of officials of the Interior Department in so far as refusal to authorize new projects is concerned. But projects already authorized, for which Congress is appropriating some $10,000,000 annually, must be kept going in order that the Government ultimately may collect moneys that will be due. Latest figures show an annual crop value of $143,000,000 on Government-irrigated land. Of the total, a little over 5 per cent represents wheat, and although this small volume is not particularly important of itself, it represents nevertheless one of the numerous items that go to make up the problem of surplus production.

The whole situation is confused. Farm relief is approaching a crossroads. The Government is involved too deeply to withdraw from the experiment. It must go forward, even if it does not see the end.

WHEN OUR SHIPS LED

By Commander H. H. FROST, U. S. N.

Recently the attention of the world has been focused on the successive record-breaking crossings of the Bremen and Europa. This peaceful victory over their British rivals brings to mind those glorious years when the beautiful ships of our Collins Line won similar successes.

Few know now that it was an American steamship which first crossed the Atlantic. This was the side-wheeler Savannah. After a voyage of 25 days from the city whose name she bore this strange craft astonished the British by appearing in the harbor of Liverpool on June 20, 1819. "She is a fine ship of 320 tons burden," wrote our minister at London, "and exhibits in her construction, no less than she has done in her navigation across the Atlantic, a signal trophy of American enterprise and skill upon the seas." This sounds much like those compliments which are now being showered upon those responsible for the successes of the giant German liners.

Despite the success of the Savannah's cruise, twenty years passed before its obvious lesson was taken to heart. Then it was England which profited from this practical demonstration of American enterprise. Finding that they could not compete with American sailing ships, the British in 1839 awarded a mail-carrying subsidy of $425,000 a year to Samuel Cunard for the transatlantic run. The next year the Cunard company put four steamers on this route. Their tonnage was about 1,150; horsepower, 400, and speed 8½ knots. In 1844 two more ships were added and in 1848 four. These last were of 1,820 tons and could make all of 10¼ knots. So completely did the Cunard fleet gain the fast passenger trade for England that the government gratefully doubled the subsidy.

Americans first met this competition with larger and faster sailing packets. But it soon was seen that we would have to go into the steamship game if we were to regain our supremacy on the high seas. But we could not run steamers in competition with the Cunarders unless we also were assisted by a Government subsidy. In 1845 Senator King, of Georgia, summarized the situation and urged a subsidy, which was granted by Congress. This action was highly approved by President Polk.

The effects of the mail subsidy were immediate and remarkable. Soon we had steam mailships plying from New York to Bremen, Havre, the West Indies and the Isthmus of Panama. Another line ran between Panama and Oregon and played a great part in opening up the immensely valuable West Coast.

But the greatest results came from the contract which the Government signed in November, 1847, with Edward K. Collins. For the annual subsidy of $385,000 Collins was to build steamers of 2,000 tons or over and make twenty mail trips annually between New York and Liverpool. Collins was a man of great ability and exalted patriotism. So determined was he to regain the fast passenger trade for America that he spared no expense to construct the finest ships afloat and operate them with the best seamen and engineers in the world. Every cent of profit his company made was used to improve the fleet. Not a single dividend did the stockholders draw from his patriotic venture.

In 1850 Collins commenced his service with four ships: Arctic, Atlantic, Baltic and Pacific. They were by far the largest ships then afloat, measuring about 2,800 tons. The chief engineer of the Navy had designed their splendid 800 horsepower engines. With a pressure of seventeen pounds of steam per square inch they could make the then enormous speed of 13 knots. In comfort and beauty of construction they stood apart in the world.

These magnificent liners soon won all the transatlantic speed records. They were a whole day faster than the Cunarders. Eastbound, they averaged through the year 10 days and 21 hours, and westbound, 11 days and 3 hours. In May, 1851, the Pacific ran from New York to Liverpool in 9 days 20 hours and 16 minutes. In July, 1852, the Arctic eclipsed this record with a run of 9 days 17 hours and 12 minutes. How we took the trade from the Cunarders is shown by a statement in the New York Herald: Between January and November, 1852, the four Collins liners carried 4,306 passengers; the seven boats of the Cunard Line, 2,969.

The Collins Line brought another advantage to American merchants. The Cunard had previously enjoyed a monopoly in fast transatlantic freight. In two years they were forced by American competition to cut their freight rates in half. In recognition of these advantages Congress increased the subsidy to $858,000.

Despite the ten-year start of the British shipping companies, our deep-sea steam tonnage had virtually equaled theirs by 1851, and our ships were better in every respect.

In 1854 the series of misfortunes which were to ruin the Collins Line commenced. The splendid Arctic was rammed and sunk by a French steamer off Cape Race. Nothing daunted, Collins commenced the construction of the gigantic Adriatic, 4,144 tons, to take her place. But in 1855, only a month after her launch, Congress commenced a move to abolish the mail subsidy. Bitterness between the North and South spelled the ruin of our great merchant marine. The Southerners declared that they were obtaining no benefit from the subsidies, as all the steamers were operated from Northern ports—the very ones, as it happened, where antislavery sentiment was strongest. They also feared that these fine steamers would be taken over by the Navy and used against them in case of secession. In 1856 Congress reduced the subsidy of the Collins Line again to $385,000. To cap the climax, the steamer Pacific disappeared at sea, without a trace. For two more years our ship owners fought it out, but it obviously was a losing game. In 1858 Congress made a further cut in the subsidies. The Collins Line sued for bankruptcy. The beautiful Adriatic was sold to a British company. At the end of 1861 the United States flag had vanished from the steam routes of the Atlantic. The knell of the American merchant marine had been sounded.

In recent years the necessity for a merchant marine has again been recognized by merchants and statesmen. Our Government is prepared to give American ship owners the support it so unfortunately withdrew in those fateful years before the Civil War. Perhaps the memory of those days when we held all records for the Atlantic ranks may induce some of our leaders of industry to organize another Collins Line—even if it offers no immediate prospect of earning dividends.

For many of the facts in this story I am indebted to W. L. Marvin, author of that excellent book, "The American Merchant Marine."

You Can't Teach Ambition Where the Native With Two Hound Dogs Feels Rich.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

ARE you an idealist or a realist?

If you are an idealist, you live in a dream world of your own creating. That is, having set up for yourself a standard of ideal manhood, you persist in seeing only those qualities and attributes that conform to your standard, and resolutely close your eyes to all facts that reveal man as he is.

If you are a realist, you see and accept the truth—good or bad, lovely or hideous—and you do not gild or discolor it with your own prejudice or desire.

If you would discover to which of these groups you belong, observe whether your conception of a public official—any public official—tallies with the accepted standard of American manhood.

That standard, as you know, supposes a "he-man" who stands four-square to all the world, fears nothing, speaks his mind, hides nothing, declares his honest convictions from the housetops, and, standing firmly on his own feet, bravely tells the world where it can go if it doesn't approve.

The idealist, having accepted that standard as a true picture of America's best, and having declared that none but the best should be given high office, endows each newly elected official with the qualities imagined in the standard.

All Presidents are great and good men because they are Presidents.

The realist knows, by observation and study, that a man who would be President must be a consummate politician, and that the first rule of the politician is to espouse popular ideals that are not in controversy and evade moot questions by using weasel words.

He can champion a popular cause and become a great leader, but he dare not take sides when the partisans, pro and con, are so nearly equal in number that no man knows which group is the stronger.

To be a successful politician he must compromise, hold his tongue, bargain, accept strange bedfellows, speak empty words and be very, very discreet.

Yet to the idealist he will seem an infallibly wise man who speaks out boldly on all public questions, so that none can doubt or misunderstand him.

And thus it is that the idealist, seeing all things only as they should be, hinders the work of the realist who exposes evil things as they are.

THE ONCE OVER

THE FACTS ABOUT THE TARIFF.

The United States Senate, after the longest sleep since Rip Van Winkle's, has passed the tariff bill, shuffling the rates on everything from china eggs to glass eyes for iron deer. The House having previously staggered through it with the help of McGinty's Dream Book and a couple of ouija boards, it now goes before a committee of otherwise carefree conferees who will translate it from the original Greek.

* * * *

Items left or transferred to the free list by the Smoot-Houdini tariff follow:

Buggy-whip sockets (uncooked), musical saws (new) and snow shovels (without ivory handles).

False teeth (uppers), sashweights (for friendly purposes) and bicycle pumps (unengraved).

Airedale teeth for B. P. O. E. watch fobs.

Nut picks (unsharpened), glass doorknobs (raw), lamp wicks, liver pads (except for decorative purposes) and canned mussels (not intended for use at christenings).

Owls (stuffed or otherwise), prune forks (with crooked stems), horseshoes (up to 3 pounds 9 ounces, not used for sport), dog muzzles and locomotive fireboxes (except for Christmas-tree decorations).

Harmoniums, fifes, jigsaw puzzles (boiled or baked), live mud turtles (costing up to $32 a dozen), paper towels, bottle openers, cookoos (without clocks) and autographed nightgowns.

All yaks, aard, varks, ewes, white mice, guinea hens and brass ornaments for iron beds.

Putty blowers (unfurled).

Windlasses (without text).

Plebiscites (except in cages), pool cues and potato-bug sprayers (light).

* * * *

The Senate and House are in accord on most of the above items, although there is wide split on yaks, false teeth, windlasses and plebiscites. Senators are for putting a high levy on yaks, but the House believes this would be interpreted as an unfriendly gesture to Sir Thomas Lipton, who is to bring his yak here this summer for the America's Cup race again. The big battle is expected to come over plebiscites. The House conferees take the stand we have marsh birds enough in this country already.

* * * *

Articles removed from the free list by the Senate are:

False whiskers (uncurled).

Horse feathers, duck blinds, mouse traps (in colors) and rabbit warrens (except for medical purposes).

Anagrams (stewed, fricaseed or parboiled), scallops (during the mating season), police whistles (up to five blasts), skatefish and the game called Blotto.

Manhole covers (unless embossed).

Desk buzzers (all sizes, types and designs).

* * * *

There will be a bitter battle on some of these items in conference, particularly on horse feathers, rabbit warrens, anagrams and desk buzzers. The House feels American growers are sufficiently protected on the horse feather and anagram crops, while the Senate says Europe is preparing to dump so many horse feathers into the country that it will ruin the farmer. The Senate and House differ slightly with regard to the duty on rabbit warrens, both desiring only to protect the so-called warrens of Virginia.

* * * *

With regard to a high tariff on desk buzzers, the Senate conferees ask a levy of $9 a buzzer and will not yield an inch. "The country is too full of desk buzzers already," said Senator Jeevix today. "I leave it to any office worker."

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

MISSING.

I kept the house so trim and neat,
But in he'd stomp with muddy feet.
He also drove me to despair
By tossing coats upon the chair,
And leaving dresser drawers pulled out
And all his clothing strewn about.

When he was here I used to fret,
Because the house was so upset.
When in he came or out he went
More picking up for me it meant,
But now I'm always looking there
To find his coat upon the chair.

He's gone, and now the place is neat,
But, oh I long for muddy feet,
And wish to goodness I could see
His papers where they used to be.
'Tis lonely living here like this,
The daily picking up I miss.

I can't abide to walk about
And never see a drawer pulled out.
'Tis hard to know that never more
I'll find his stuff upon the floor,
And never more I'll have to fret
Because the house seems so upset.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Circles Should Be Abolished, as Traffic Dangers and Ellipse Should Be Utilized for Parking Cars.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like to suggest that the only satisfactory means for avoiding the traffic danger and inconvenience at Dupont and Thomas circles is by doing away with the circles altogether. I feel right certain that sometime—and the sooner the better—all such circles will be gotten rid of, and certainly no more parks of that kind should be planned thereafter.

This is a case in which beauty should be sacrificed in favor of utility, even if the safety of the public were not at stake.

If L'Enfant and Washington had known that such a vehicle as the automobile would ever be invented they would never have thought of such a thing as parks at intersections. They were so practical and far-sighted in their planning that it is a wonder they did not realize how objectionable these intersection parks might be in the case of horse-drawn vehicles.

Perhaps where such circles are already laid out, a portion of the parking might be saved, but such details as that are for the experts to attend to. What I insist on is that in the future the small parks of the city should be so located as not to interfere with traffic.

The Ellipse is an unnecessary waste of valuable space that could be devoted to parking. MOTORIST.

College Boys Will Learn More After They Are Out in Real Life.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That students of sixteen colleges and universities have recorded, through the medium of straw votes, an overwhelming sentiment in favor of repeal or modification of the prohibition laws may be of interest to the authorities of the various institutions, but it may be doubted that college sentiment against prohibition will have any effect. Much is made by the wet forces of the fact that college students are the voters of the immediate tomorrow. But the college student when he passes for the last time through the academic portal generally undergoes a metamorphosis. Today he may be in favor of repeal of the prohibition law, but tomorrow his entire outlook may be changed.

The college student is naturally a radical. He has not been brought face to face with reality, and he grasps at theoretical perfection without realizing that practical considerations may stand in the way of its realization. He is young and he likes change of any sort, whether it be for better or for worse. When he gets out in the world he discovers that other men, as good as he is, have gone over the road and found practical obstacles to the instantaneous consummation of ideals. The college graduates, in other words, will gain practical sense after they leave college. Their present views on prohibition or any other complicated public question are not worth a damn. Let Youngsters in Free to See Ball Games, Urges Old Fan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The story on the sporting page of The Post Thursday, March 27, regarding the free admission of youths to major league ball games is a fine idea. There are no more knot holes through which these youngsters can watch the games, and by admitting the younger children to the games a few days a week it will take thousands of them away from the dangers of traffic which they face when playing in the street.

Not only will the children be aided but the major league clubs will benefit after the youngsters grow to manhood as a result of this free admission. Youth in general will become interested in the game and after reaching the age of young men they will still have the desire to watch major league games, hence they will pay to attend the games, thus increasing the general attendance.

Many Washington ball fans will recall the time when the tree just outside of the park by the right field fence was crowded with youngsters as well as grown folks, all seeking to get a good view of the game for nothing. The height of this right field fence was increased some time ago, which made it practically impossible for people to get a view of the diamond from their perch on the limbs of the tree.

Many of the major league teams have free admission days for youngsters, and I think it would be a very good idea for the Washington Ball Club to follow this practice. It will help the club in the long run.

An Old Man Puts Up a Poser to the Lawmakers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is it good in political economy, or in morals, to enact a law which makes good citizens become lawbreakers? I am an old man, what may be said a very old man, having passed my ninetieth year. Age brings weakness. My doctor says I need a stimulant, recommending whisky—two gills a day. How can I get it? I must have a doctor's prescription. I obtain one from him, at a cost of $3. I have to pay the druggist another $3, and get only a pint. Six dollars for a pint of stimulant! At two gills a day, the pint lasts less than a week. My income is not sufficient to stand such a drain, hence I must do without what I need for health, or become a lawbreaker. What can I do?

DE VALERA ELECTION NOT LIKELY, HE SAYS

His Victory in Ireland Would Be "Greek Gift," States Candidate in Chicago.

CITES COSGRAVE POWER

Chicago, March 30 (A.P.).—Eamonn De Valera, former president of the Irish Republic and candidate for election to the presidency of the Irish Free State, today said his selection by the Dail Eireann Wednesday was highly improbable, and added that if he were named the gesture would be comparable to the bestowal of a "Greek gift."

"My election next Wednesday is altogether improbable," the leader of the Fianna Fail, minority party, told the Associated Press in an interview.

"The Cosgrave party and its allies have a majority. Were they to consent to my election, the intention would be to bestow a Greek gift. It would compare in detail to the evacuation of Troy by the Greeks, who, apparently leaving the town in good faith, left behind a gigantic wooden horse containing several legions of fighting men to carry on the war.

"A minority administration could be constantly harassed and hampered by the hostile majority opposition and could scarcely hope to put through any measures on which the success of its policies would depend.

"Mr. Cosgrave, who resigned as president last week, may dissolve Parliament after reelection and chance a general election.

"For my part I propose to continue my tour of the United States pending developments and will see to the completion of my newspaper enterprise no matter what happens. The establishment of a really national newspaper which will gather the news and facts and present them uncolored and unbiased to the people is a fundamental necessity for any sustained and constructive effort. The editorial columns of such a newspaper provide the leadership required for the solution of Ireland's major problems.

"Were the improbable to happen and I were elected, I would, of course, form a Fianna Fail (Republican) government and proceed with the carrying out of our declared policies."

Mr. De Valera, who has been in the United States since last December aiding a campaign for funds with which to establish a daily newspaper campaign in Ireland, was to leave for St. Paul tonight. He was scheduled to deliver several addresses there.

They Call It Politics

By CARTER FIELD

WHAT with a former distiller running dry, and a minister running wet against him with Oscar De Priest, the Negro member of the House, being opposed by jealous members of his own race, and with Fred Britten, the champion British Lion's tail twister in Congress, unopposed, all in addition to the big show in the main tent, Illinois politics is fairly boiling.

The main show, of course, is the "grudge fight" of Ruth Hanna McCormick, daughter of Mark Hanna, of McKinley fame, and widow of Senator Medill McCormick, against Senator Charles S. Deneen for the Republican nomination for senator. Mrs. McCormick has never forgiven Mr. Deneen for defeating her husband for renomination six years ago. Ever since she has planned and studied for the present fight, and it would surprise no one if she should succeed. Indeed, most of the expert observers in Illinois at the present moment concede that she has at least an edge.

* * * *

ON past performances Ruth McCormick stands Number 1 among women who have sought elective office in this country. Other women have been elected to the House of Representatives, many of them because they were the widows of their husbands, and the first of them, Jeannette Rankin, in her own right. But no woman so far has carried a State-at-large vote except the two women governors, each of whom succeeded a husband who held the same office.

Mrs. McCormick ran in the Republican primaries two years ago for election as representative at large. She was voted on in every precinct in the State, from the Michigan line down to Cairo. It was a bitter primary. Frank L. Smith was seeking vindication and did not get it. Len Small, then governor, found his machine ineffectual. The existence of the William Hale Thompson machine in Chicago was at stake.

REALLY it was quite a demonstration of vote getting ability, a talent that Senator Deneen viewed with some apprehension at the time, knowing full well that she was just training for her race against him this year. In addition to its being a campaign of revenge, Mrs. McCormick has been able to center the issue largely on the issue which her husband had made his own in Illinois—the League of Nations.

Every one knows that President Hoover has promised to submit World Court ratification to the Senate in the near future. There is a general feeling that there are enough votes in the Senate to make the necessary two-thirds majority. To vote for the World Court, to hear Mrs. McCormick in her appeals, is the first step toward getting the United States in the League by the back door. That, she says, is what Deneen stands for. She is violently opposed to it, as Medill would have been.

* * * *

IF she should win the primary, which is at least possible if not probable, she will be confronted, in all probability, by another former senator, James Hamilton Lewis, of pink whiskered fame. Lewis is seeking in the Democratic primary to capitalize the wet and dry issue, Illinois having voted wet by enormous pluralities, but continuing to elect dry senators and mostly dry members of the House, as do some other big States that go wet in referendums, notably Pennsylvania.

This would present another coincidence, for Medill McCormick came to the Senate by defeating J. Ham Lewis. So if Mrs. McCormick should defeat in the primary the man who beat her husband, she would then run in the election against the man her husband defeated.

Which is almost as funny as William E. "Ed" Hull, a former distiller, being frightened on the wet and dry issue down in Peoria by the Rev. Edwin S. Carr, Democrat, and whirlwind advocate of modification!

MONACAN ELECTION IS WON BY DYNASTY

Prince Louis Is Expected to Abandon Abdication Idea as Result.

VOTING IS LIKE FESTIVAL

Monte Carlo, March 30 (A.P.).—The party of Mayor Eugene Marquet, favorable to the maintenance of the present dynasty in Monaco, today carried the national and municipal elections by an overwhelming majority.

The elections passed off very calmly under the watchful eyes of army and police. The military forces, supplemented by French detectives and secret service men, crowded in front of the city hall, appearing to outnumber the voters, who came and went in small groups.

In view of his large majority, Mayor Marquet is expected to prevail upon Prince Louis of Monaco, who is understood to be thoroughly disgusted with the party bickerings and Casino quarrels in his principality, to abandon the idea of abdicating. The prince considered doing this in February, but was dissuaded by the French government, and decided to await the result of the elections.

His retention of the throne will probably eliminate the friction between the followers of Prince Pierre and of Princess Charlotte, recently separated by decree after their matrimonial difficulties had set the whole principality by the ears. Prince Pierre will be regent on behalf of their son, Prince Reynier.

The party led by the fiery lawyer, M. Bonaventure, withdrew early in the morning, and a third party, headed by M. Aureglia did likewise in the afternoon, so that the Marquet followers had things all their own way.

The Bonaventurists did not give up without a protest. Their official reason for withdrawing was that "the Marquet party has sold out to the casino interests; the Bonaventure party can not combat such financial backing."

Under the balmy Riviera air, the voting became a kind of public festival. It was almost a "light opera" election. The Marquet party rounded up their voters with twenty limousines, transporting them to and from their homes, though in the little principality few of them would have had to walk very far.

Finding the Needle In the Haystack

A PROBLEM ELIMINATED BY THE NEW

POST Classified Section

Few would attempt the almost impossible task of finding a "needle in a haystack"—but if the stack should be divided into sections and then subdivided into piles of but a few straws each with one prominently marked "The needle is here" there would be little difficulty . . . The ordinary "Want-Ad" columns present an equally hard problem to the reader who must search through hundreds of offerings in order to find the article which he desires.

These improved columns contain a greater number and variety of offerings than ever before but, by an improved NEW method of classifying and indexing, it is possible to locate the "needle," or wanted article, almost instantly. NEW typographical arrangement and limitations also prove of great aid to the reader, and the services of trained ad-takers and copy-writers lend new interest to the various advertising messages . . . Think of some article or service which you may desire NOW, and then turn to the new classified section that announces, "Here it is!"

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Dublin Crisis Is Interesting Capital Group

Both Leading Candidates in Ireland Visited Washington.

By JEAN ELIOT.

SINCE both men now regarded as "presidential possibilities" in the Irish Free State, Mr. William T. Cosgrave and Mr. Eamon de Valera, are known in Washington, there is special interest here in the Dublin crisis, which has been figuring so importantly in the news in the last few days. Mr. de Valera has visited here upon occasion unofficially, and Mr. Cosgrave, as president of the executive council of the Irish Free State, paid a visit of ceremony in the Capital in the Coolidge administration. He made the happiest impression upon officials with whom he came in contact, and made many friends who are hoping for his reelection.

After a tenure of office lasting longer than that of any present premier in Europe, Mr. Cosgrave tendered his resignation and his cabinet's to the Dail Eireann Friday, the government falling in consequence of its defeat on a bill extending the scope of old age pensions, which it opposed. Dispatches from Dublin imply that Mr. Cosgrave, as the leader of the Cummann-na-Ghaedheal (League of the Gael), can defeat Mr. de Valera, the leader of Fianna Fail (the Irish Republican party), and it is probable that the question will be decided when the Dail convenes again on Wednesday.

Although generally spoken of as "President Cosgrave," the distinguished Irish leader has had rather the rank of a prime minister, and it was with the honors accorded such visiting dignitaries that he was received in Washington when he was entertained at the White House and by distinguished officials. Had he been President of the Irish Free State instead of President of the Executive Council, a return visit by the President of the United States would have been in order. But under the circumstances Mr. Cosgrave's "call of courtesy" was returned by Mr. Frank B. Kellogg, then Secretary of State, who, with Mrs. Kellogg, paid a visit to Dublin to be feted and made much of by Irish officials.

French Air Ace Will Be Guest At Dinner Here

Count de la Vaulx to Visit City as Climax of Flying Tour.

Adding another link to the magic chain of air routes, Count de la Vaulx, knight of the air and president of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale, will climax his picturesque conquest of American air lines with a visit to Washington on April 14, coming here from Los Angeles after a tour of South and Central America and Mexico. As the guest of Senator Hiram Bingham, president of the National Aeronautical Association, and Mrs. Bingham, he will be given an opportunity to meet the leaders of aviation on this side of the Atlantic. Senator and Mrs. Bingham are planning a dinner in his honor and he will be the guest at luncheon of the Aero Club of Washington.

The notable French airman left his native land on February 17, flying the South Atlantic to visit the Argentine, Bolivia, Peru, Chile, Ecuador and Panama, visiting also Mexico City and important stations in Central America. An ovation was accorded him at El Paso, where he was met by fourteen Government planes and later was guest of honor at a dinner given by the Aviation Club of El Paso.

Ignoring his 60 years, the veteran airman considers no day complete without four or five hours in the air and in this last trip has made a comprehensive survey of commercial air routes on the two Western continents. En route to Washington he will stop in Dayton to see Orville Wright, his friend of many years.

From Waashington he will go to Canada and then return to South America by way of Cuba and the Antilles. From Venezuela he will fly down the east coast of South America to Brazil and from there homeward to France.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

ALTHOUGH the auditorium was only comfortably filled, more persons heard the spelling bee Saturday night than any event in the history of the Press Club. Even more than when Lindbergh addressed the club, because double the number of stations are now on the networks. Some of the members listened to the spelling bee on the Press Club receiving set in the lounging room in preference to actually witnessing the contest which they might have done by walking a few steps farther.

The six microphones, three of Columbia and three of N. B. C., like all sentinels staring them in the face, didn't exactly have a soothing influence on the contestants who, in the beginning, were a pretty badly frightened lot. With Senator Fess playing his old role of school teacher so realistically, they looked, sitting in rows, all attention, like overgrown boys the first day of school.

So rigidly was this decorum maintained that during the entire hour only one of the "boys" ventured to talk back to the "teacher" and that was Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, who transposed the "i" and "a" in spelling indigenous. When Senator Fess rang the bell on him, he gave the latter a look which it is just as well the radio audience didn't see. Senator Fess, in turn, had an expression on his face which as much as said, "You might get away with that in the Senate—but not in this school."

Whereupon Senator Connally, growing red in the face, turned his back to the microphone and began arguing with the "teacher" about like a baseball player caught off of third base talks to an umpire.

This resulted in the Texan getting another chance at which time he again made the mistake and down he went to join the chagrined group at the foot of the class.

The spelling bee was a hilarious event for the radio listeners but was frequently for more serious for the audible audience, who seeing the "lost" expression on the faces of the spellers, would exclaim in sympathy—"too bad," "he ought to have another chance," &c. This was heard when John Monk, of the New York Times, spelled "bivouacked" without a "k." John said never a word when Senator Fess rang the old school bell, but he looked as if he had lost his last friend on earth.

All the newspapermen had boned up on the word "psittacosis" (parrot fever) but Senator Fess was too foxy to ask them this.

ALTHOUGH entitled to a liberal company discount, a high official in a large radio manufacturing company found during the sales now going on in Washington stores that he could purchase one of his company's sets cheaper in a local store than by dealing with his own company. Accordingly he took advantage of the situation to buy a set for his brother.

"It was the greatest bargain I have ever known in that particular set," he remarked.

"Meet the Missus," Henry Ford might say if he were introducing his wife, when she speaks over WRC at 3:45 o'clock this afternoon.

The speech of Mr. Byrne, of the American Radiator Co., was pretty hot.

"MILLIONS in many lands listened-in over the radio." News dispatch describing the Eckener-National Geographic gold medal presentation.

Quite remarkable since the ceremonies were not broadcast.

When President Hoover converses Thursday by short-wave telephone over the new International Telegraph & Telephone circuit, with the Presidents of Argentina, Chile and Uruguay, radio listeners throughout this country, on ships at sea and in other lands will be enabled by Columbia to hear the exchange of greetings.

CORNELL will have a Nation-wide program over Columbia, including WMAL, at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow evening. There will be speeches by Dr. Jacob Gould Shurman, former president of the university, and Dr. Livingston Farrand, president.

Dare INTERPRETS the MODE

We'd call it a "luscious" negligee, with its peach chiffon over satin, and its gold lace. (Courtesy of Ardanse, Paris.)

Paris, March 30.

THE normal waistline very logically brings the belt into popularity for the spring and summer seasons. Hence some very interesting belts have been featured among the couturiers of Paris, thereby enhancing and decorating the natural curve of miladi's waist.

For instance, Bernard et Cie. have relied on the belt to present the real color note of a costume. Serviceable tan mixtures are enlivened and made smart by a bright red belt. This house particularly features a belt hidden at the back of a tweed coat or suit by shirring, and open to view only in the front.

The Maison Worth has done some lovely things with flat beading effecting a belt, on both afternoon and evening dresses.

And the house of Schiaparelli is offering several handkerchief-belts, sometimes triangular pieces of the material of the dress incrusted tightly over the hips, and then tying in a loose knot at the waistline. This is primarily a sports touch and I think will be seen on many tennis frocks this year.

Heim belts we've already told you about—those smartly distinctive belts with the new Heim fox head usually executed in silver and black; it's a nice way of saying it for you—that here you are wearing a Heim dress, than which nothing could be more chic.

• • • •

One expects a negligee to be a negligee, or a "tea gown," as they are more elegantly called, and when Ardanse says it, it is one!

• • • •

So I illustrated it for you today in all its loveliness of peach colored chiffon and fine gold lace. Note how it ties over a matching satin underskirt, or could tie over a peach colored nightie.

• • • •

You have no idea how chic collars and cuffs are these days! All Paris goes collared and cuffed this season! Because collars and cuffs, which we haven't seen for several seasons on smart dresses, are so undeniably flattering and youthful, and also because they are so decorative, they have again come into favor.

• • • •

We've made you an illustrated leaflet of the smartest ones we saw on various smart frocks here and there in Paris, and if you send a stamped self-addressed envelope to the Dare department of The Washington Post for it, you can bring a Paris touch to your new frocks.

• • • •

So often the fine white linen or batiste or transparent voile blouse worn with a tweed tailleur is embroidered, oh, very discreetly, with silks or woolens that match the various colors in the tweeds. Or when silk jerseys are worn with a tweed tailleur, these are often incrusted with the tweed, which gives more of an appearance of a one-piece frock than of a waist and skirt, or waist and pullover.

In addition to all these things, you will find many items and notes of interest in the weekly Dare fashion letter in The Sunday Washington Post.

Au revoir!

Sister of Pope Pius X Dies of Long Illness

Rome, March 30 (A.P.). — Donna Maria Sarto, only surviving sister of Pope Pius X, died today. She had been ill for several weeks.

Donna Maria accompanied her brother on many of his pastoral missions before his election as Pope in 1903. Recently she had lived in a small apartment overlooking St. Peter's square.

The Goofus Sheep

(Suggested by B. deL. M., of Rochester, N. Y.)

The Goofus Sheep, so I've been told,
Has wandered far from out the fold,
In search of grass a bit more green—
In funny pastures he's been seen.
But while I know he'll not be sainted,
He's not as black as he's been painted!

WORK ON BRIDGE

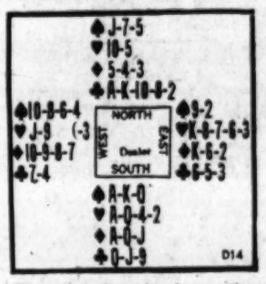
GOOD NEWS, BRIDGERS.

We are pleased to announce we can now renew the offer of Milton C. Work's great Contract and Auction booklet entitled "THE PLAYING PROBLEMS." Bridgers who received copies from previous offers are most enthusiastic over it.

"PLAYING PROBLEMS" presents eighteen hands, the complete auction and contract bidding for each hand with reasons for each bid, the answers to every question and the reason for each answer in complete detail.

"PLAYING PROBLEMS," which will be of much greater value to the auction and contract player than many high-priced textbooks, is not for sale. It has been prepared exclusively for readers of this newspaper by special arrangement with Mr. Work. One copy will be mailed to you upon request if you send self-addressed stamped return envelope, together with 6 cents in stamps to defray part of the cost of printing and handling this 48-page booklet. Requests not complying with these conditions will be ignored.

MISPLAYED HANDS I HAVE MET.



When the above hand was played at Progressive Contract, the declaration at every table was No Trump. At most tables three No Trumps was the Contract, only one or two bidding for a slam as I think would be correct.

South has a count of 25, a very powerful hand but nevertheless two points short of a four No Trump bid; he should bid three No Trumps, West should pass, and North bid four Clubs. North has a count of 8 without reckoning either the two Tens or the length in the Club suit; the latter with its Ace-King, is a powerful asset because with a partner bidding three No Trumps (showing four suits stopped) five tricks in Clubs are reasonably assured, although that suit is apt to be South's weakness. North's bid of four Clubs instead of four No Trumps gives South more accurate informati ..; and after East pass South should risk the small slam bid, because his hand is much stronger than a minimum three No Trumps, and he is guaranteed assistance where it is needed.

At Auction Bridge, South would bid one No Trump, which would obtain the contract.

West led a Spade at all tables, and a majority of the Declarers made thirteen tricks; but at several tables the adversaries took two tricks. The Declarers who lost these tricks did so by leading five rounds of Clubs after winning the first Spade. South discarded two Hearts on the last two Club tricks, and then North led a Diamond for a South finesse. This made South's Ace and Queen but failed to drop East's King, and the Declarers lost to the two red Kings, although by leading one more Spade and then the losing Diamond, a Heart lead could have been forced from East.

THE CORRECT PLAY.

The failure to make the grand slam was inexcusable as Declarer should have seen that he would want to lead Hearts once from dummy and might want to lead Diamonds twice. He should have overtaken the first Club in dummy and led a Diamond; when that finesse won, a second Club should have been overtaken in dummy and a second Diamond led. After that the Clubs should have been run and two Hearts discarded by South; then the Heart finesse for the grand slam.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

WHITEWASH.

(Bureau of Standards.)

The cheapest of all paints is whitewash, and for certain purposes it is best. Lime, which is the basis of whitewash, makes it a very sanitary coating and is, hence, to be preferred for cellars and the interior of stables and other outbuildings.

Ordinary whitewash made by slaking quicklime and adding water to produce a mixture of proper and uniform spreading consistency, affords the most sanitary coating, but does not adhere so well as does whitewash to which certain additions are made. Five pounds of quicklime will suffice to make about one gallon of ordinary whitewash.

The additions made to ordinary whitewash which tend to make a material which will produce a better or more lasting coat are quite various, such as salt, flour paste, milk, glue, cement, alum, zinc sulphate, sodium silicate, soap, &c.

The following recipe is a very good one, having been successfully used on wood, brick and stone by the Bureau of Lighthouses for many years:

Slake half a bushel of unslaked lime with boiling water, keeping it covered during the process. Strain it and add a peck of salt dissolved in warm water; 3 pounds of ground rice put in boiling water and boiled to a thin paste; half a pound of powdered Spanish whiting and a pound of clear glue, dissolved in warm water; mix these well together and let the mixture stand for several days. Keep the wash thus prepared in a kettle or portable furnace, and when used put it on as hot as possible, with painters' or whitewash brushes.

ANNIVERSARY

What Today Means to You

"ARIES."

IF March 31 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 a. m. to 10:45 a. m., from 3 p. m. to 4 p. m. and from 9 p. m. to 10:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 6 a. m. to 7:30 a. m. and from 6 p. m. to 7:30 p. m.

The influences on this date are energizing, and you will feel an inclination to do more than is a physical possibility. Unexpected business developments, which may cause a change in the blueprints of your life. The meeting of a new friend of fortune.

The child born on this March 31 will be selfishly inclined and of a very retiring nature. It will be a deep thinker, and with application could become a leader in the school room. It will be fonder of reading than sports and will have to be influenced to take proper health exercises.

You seem to have been born "sensible;" and it has not taken you years to sort out the grain from the chaff. Some people have no values at all and others have the scales well weighted down with bias, but you are honestly balanced.

You are, above all things, a good friend and a true companion. You are "understanding" in the broadest sense of the word, for what you do not understand in others you are prepared to accept and leave it at that. You know when to talk and when to be silent, when to be serious and when to be flippant; when to ask questions and when to keep quiet. You enjoy life and you make others enjoy it, too; you are destined to never grow too old to feel young. You like trees and plants, and animals and birds, and other creatures of the so-called lower world even better than human beings.

As a worker you are neat and methodical and you are able to concentrate on the thing in hand. You try to live wisely, squarely, peacefully and happily, and in this respect you do not fail. You seldom frown, but often smile and laugh—to you this is a good world.

Successful people born March 31:

1—Alexander B. Mott, surgeon.
2—William Waldorf Astor, capitalist.
3—Robert Bunsen, chemist.
4—Gov. James M. Cox, of Ohio.
5—Duke of Gloucester, third son of King of England.
6—Gilbert W. Gaul, artist.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

ALTHOUGH we are usually accused of being prejudiced in favor of the men, today our mail contains two letters begging mercy for the chesty sex.

Seems some time or other we said something about men being "ever deceitful creatures" and behold two wives to the rescue. One says men are not "creatures." The other says she would not trust any woman. Maybe not, maybe not. Anyway, we were but speaking lightly when we called the lordly ones "deceitful creatures." We do not hold their faults against them, since they do not choose their weaknesses. But we gladly present the defense side leat the column be misled by our slighting references to a proud and noble, half of humankind.

"How can you deliberately prejudice hundreds of young women who read what you so flippantly write about men? You tell women to 'make the best of the ever-deceitful creatures.' Ever deceitful? Woman is the ever deceitful one. I am a woman, and I would not trust any woman that ever lived. I will trust a man if he is a decent man. But a woman can be a 'decent' woman and be unspeakably deceitful and dishonest. She will kiss you and defame you.

"She will live in your house and decoy your husband. She will humiliate you and offer you the kiss of sympathy. I took in an old school friend, widowed and penniless. She wrecked my home. My husband did not want her, but he lost me anyway. To this day, ten years later, he is trying to get me back. I do not blame him, but the woman I trusted, to my cost.

"Men are proud of their honor. Women pride themselves upon their ability to appear honorable while being the opposite. It is our own sex that says the sin is in being caught. Well, I am one woman who prefers the honest vices of men to the secret perfidy of women.

"FAIR PLAY"

And now comes "Reader," who is equally sure that we have wronged the poor men beyond pardon.

Dear Miss McDonald—Never did I think I should write a public letter! But some recent articles of yours made me feel I must answer you. Experiences have evidently come into your life which have made you very bitter. For that I am sorry. You call men "creatures" and speak of them almost as if they were loathsome. Believe me, you are so wrong. I have been married 23 years; have a son 21. His last birthday, on his sixteenth, his twentieth and others, his father brought me roses in memory of his birth. Does that seem the act of a "creature?"

Love is a contest in unselfishness and that is the foundation upon which our home rests. For instance, my husband prefers the meals I cook at home, but, in order to give me a change, has always made a practice of taking me out to dinner one day each week. If I suggested it, he would go oftener. But I want to do my part, so usually go just once. He plays golf, I do not; but am glad for him to play. When he is going to play he 'phones me. That means dinner nearer 7 than 5:30 but I am glad to do it for him.

Don't think such an even life means a mild disposition for he is naturally of a quick, nervous disposition though thank God with a ready wit and keen sense of humor. Our breakfast table has been a joy to all who have had that meal with us simply due to this man's presence. This man whom you would call a "creature."

I grant you, happiness in married life is not an accident but an achievement. But the point is it can be. There are men getting the "raw deal" you think only women get in marriage. I know as many fine men as fine women and men I honor more than I do their wives. We get from men very largely what we expect and praise in them. There are happy homes. I have one and have absolute faith my son will find another. I am one who stays married because she is still in love, and more so, after 23 years. "READER."

Greek Minister Speaks At Liberty Celebration

Greeks of the Ahepa and Gapa Societies celebrated the one hundredth anniversary of their country's independence yesterday with impressive ceremonies culminating in an address by Charalambos Simopoulos, Minister of Greece. The societies met jointly in the auditorium of the Central High School.

Theodore Agnew spoke on behalf of the Ahepa members, and the spokesman of the Gapa group was James Theophelatos. A feature of the ceremony was a parade in the hall by more than 100 small girls, dressed in the colorful costumes of their native land. The hall was decorated with Greek and American flags, and an orchestra alternately played Greek [illegible] tunes.

Blooms Bedeck Cells of Two Held in Killing; Marchand Gets Fan Mail.

ALL SHOW CALMNESS

Buffalo, N. Y., March 30 (A.P.).—Stolid old Nancy Bowen, Cayuga Indian, and the gum-chewing Lila Jimerson, of the Seneca Tribe, for sight of whom a courtroom mob has argued and fought police for a fortnight, remained in the seclusion of their cells today, alone with their Indian thoughts.

Through the long, sleepy hours of a quiet Sunday, Lila, undisturbed by visitors, had opportunity to muse over the attempt of the State to place on her thin shoulders half the responsibility for the killing of Mrs Henri Marchand. She had ample time to wonder if the dozen witnesses called by her counsel could smash with their testimony the story of the State's witnesses that she conspired with Nancy to kill Mrs. Marchand because she desired the woman's husband, French artist, for herself.

Nancy, however, apparently is not troubled by legal matters. She is concerned with the business of witches and the sorcery that shapes the affairs of her relatives on the Cattaraugus Reservation. She has already told the jury her part in the case—she killed a witch named "Clottilda Brown" because she had been warned by letters signed "Mrs. Dooley," that the witch had cast an evil spell over her people.

Lila's cell in Erie County Jail is brightened by flowers sent by Buffalo women; Nancy's cell is graced by silk stockings. During the testimony, Nancy told of having but one pair of very badly worn cotton stockings. Her testimony was published and she has been flooded with that article of clothing for three days.

In another cell in the men's quarter of the jail Henri Marchand spent the morning preparing for visitors. Publication of his testimony has brought to his cell what the puzzled jailers finally decided was "fan mail."

When District Attorney Guy B Moore rested his case Friday afternoon, the defense counsel said it probably would need but one day to present its evidence through the twelve witnesses. The trial continues tomorrow.

HOPE WANES FOR 16 TRAPPED BY BLAST

coal loaders, and the remainder were men employed in maintaining the ventilating and bracing systems of the mine.

Ordinarily many more than the sixteen would have been trapped, but Saturday afternoon the mine did not operate full force, and only 20 were inside when the explosion occurred from some cause still undetermined.

Most of the experts attributed it to a gas or dust explosion, caused possibly by a mishap as one of the men blasted a shelf of coal.

The one hope held for them was that some or all might have got together and "bratticed" themselves in a section of the mine. That is, they might have erected temporary walls of lumber and air-tight cloth provided in constructing the mine, in order to exclude the foul air which follows explosions.

Last night and today one of the biggest tasks of the rescue squads was to rebuild these demolished brattice walls, which make it possible for a huge exhaust fan on the outside to suck air through the mine. The explosion was so violent that it shattered these life-maintaining walls and made the mine a death trap.

Mr. Damile expressed the opinion that there was very little likelihood that any of the entombed men would be found alive.

HAWKS AT TUCSON IN GLIDER FLIGHT

motored biplane piloted by J. D. Jernigan, jr., San Diego aviator.

Two hours and nineteen minutes after leaving San Diego the two ships landed at Yuma, Ariz., to refuel the biplane.

Accompanying Jernigan in the plane is Wallace Franklin, of Ann Arbor, Mich., brother of R. E. Franklin, University of Michigan professor and designer of the glider.

Hawk's craft was attached to Jernigan's ship with a 500-foot rope. As the powered plane was "given the gun" at the take-off here and gathered speed along the ground, Hawks gracefully wafted his light canvas-and-wood carrier into the air.

A few seconds later the tow ship left the ground and the strange pair were off on their flight.

Jernigan yesterday towed Hawks to San Diego from Los Angeles, completing a round-trip between the two cities. After arriving at Lindbergh Field, Hawks made final preparations and set daybreak as the starting time. This morning, however, a light mist delayed the flight for a time. The sky was slightly overcast at the take-off.

Hawks is carrying a special package of mail conveying greetings from San Diego to New York.

Girl's Hip Broken By Auto.

Beatrice Hayden, 14 years old, living at Rock Point, Md., was brought to the Emergency Hospital here last night suffering from a broken hip. Her condition is said to be not serious. An automobile accident near the girl's home caused the injury, police were told.

IN THE PLAYHOUSE

By JOHN J. DALY

Gilbert Miller, by arrangement with Maurice Browne, presents "Journey's End," a play in three acts, by R. C. Sherriff, directed by Stanley Bell. The cast:

Captain Hardy	Robert Noble
Lieut. Osborne	Henry Stephenson
Private Mason	Dan Booker
Second Lieut. Raleigh	Frederick Catling
Capt. Stanhope	Richard Bird
Second Lieut. Trotter	Norman Pierce
Second Lieut. Hibbert	G. P. Huntley, jr.
Company Sergeant Major	John Parrish
The Colonel	Charles Esdale
German Soldier	Ben Kranz
Broughton	Vernon Downing
Private	Arthur Stenning

After numerous disappointments, Washington theatergoers finally got a glimpse of "Journeys End" last night in Poli's Theater.

By this time, all the world and his brother must know something of "Journeys End," the play that encompasses the great World War envisions it from a dug-out, and makes such a grandiloquent plea for peace and the by-products of brotherly love; a plea that is no way a preachment.

R. C. Sheriff, the British author of "Journey's End," has done here what every man who ever had anything to do with the World War has wanted donce since the armistice was signed: has done what almost every other author failed to do, catch the completeness of all the emotions and wrap them into one bundle—laid now on the doorsteps of the world. As some one not long ago, in a lecture, phrased it, "This is the play that should be shown to every man in every country on earth who might in any way have something to do with the making of war."

Well, here it is at last on the stage of Poli's Theater, "Journey's End," and played by a cast competent enough to suit the most meticulous, either in the realm of the artistic or the military.

There is, t obegin with, Richard Bird, a war veteran himself, playing the part of Capt. Stanhope; that 23-year-old company commander who has seen four years' service in the front line trenches. And what hasn't he seen? In the real war, Bird got a bullet hole in his right foot. Last night this caused him to put on a limp more realistic. His performance all through is a memorable one—and not likely to be forgotten.

Henry Stephenson, lean, lanky, lovable, in the role of Lieut. Osborne, second in command, is admirably cast. 'Tis Osborne—the boys call him Uncle—who calms ruffled nerves. He was a schoolmaster in prewar times, a sensitive sould who becomes a stoic, and the bravest of 'em all.

Capt. Stanhope's hero-worshipper at college comes along to join this band of English army officers doing duty in a British trench back of St. Quentin. This is young Raleigh, fresh from the academic walls, and played wonderfully well by Frederick Catling. It is one of the inspiring roles in the play, nad Catling turns in a sympathetic study.

Norman Pierce is entrusted with the part of Second Lieut. Trotter, who always feels the need of a bit of tea. Fat and forty, Trotter is an amiable cuss who takes life as he finds it, even in the front line trenches, and is satisfied so long as there is enough meat raiton to go round.

There are soldiers and soldiers, of course, in "Journey's End." Along with the heroes must come the cowards. So it befalls the lot of G P. Huntley, jr., to play the part of Lieut. Hibbert, who cries and pleads neuralgia when the bombs begin to burst.

The comedy relief in "Journey's End" finds expression through the cockney accent of Private Mason, the cook, pro tem, played by Dan Booker—a role out of real life; as they all are. There are other characters in the play, but of lesser note.

In the main, this is the company, a group of officers, assembled in the month of March, in the year 1918, about the time the Germans were beginning to make their big offensive, the last plunge forward. They are all there in a dug-out, with No Man's Land just up and over an entrance-way above them—an open doorway that lets in the flush of dawn or dusk, or the in-between times, and does eternally more than that; brings in all out-doors, with the war as the obnoxious guest. That's a great little doorway, through which the men who fought for Great Britain pass—in and out, in and out; sometimes out, never to come in again.

Yes, "Journey's End" is a great play—as great as all the critics and post-war orators have said it is; perhaps greater.

GAYETY

When United Road Shows, producers of "Best Show in Town," nominated Reggie White to take the lead in this show, left vacant by the departure of Mae Martin, they were probably unaware that within a few weeks Reggie would step out to be one of the cleverest featured women on the Mutual Wheel. Yesterday's audiences agree that she has done this and a little more. This beautiful brunette showed plenty of personality, and all during the performance her work put the fans in an enjoyable mood to welcome the appearance of Sammy Rice, jr., the dancing "kid." Bob Starzman and Costello, a copule of comics who dominate the performance with their humor.

A little soubrette, Marie Miller, showed class yesterday. Her peppy work earned her numerous encores. Eva DuBois and Boots Rush had little trouble winning the crowd in their numbers. The velvet parade, a scene which bring out the chorus and Miss White in some nifty costumes and the collegiana specialty with Rice and Rush, went over big. Virginia Downs, a pretty brunette soubrette, went through a singing and dancing specialty and showed plenty of class.

Praise is continuing to reign over the circuit for Matt Mannix and his Troublesome Troubadours.

The Ballot Box

The key to the sealed and locked ballot box will be placed in the vaults of The Washington Post until called for by the official judges after 9 P. M. Saturday, April 6. Remittance sheets must be correctly balanced by that time or at least be within the office of the Campaign Manager. On the closing day of the contest the campaign staff can offer no assistance to candidates in any way excepting by answering questions for the general information of candidates.

Make this the biggest-paying week of your life for it is the remaining six days of this campaign that will decide who is to receive the big $3,630 Cadillac Sedan, the powerful Nash 8 Sedan and the ten other big automobiles as well as the sixteen Atwater Kent and Majestic radios. Every day counts as no former days ever have and the liberal new vote scales for both subscriptions and second payments offer new opportunities to amass amazing vote totals. Determine that one of these big prizes is going to be YOURS—you alone can place your name with the winners to be announced as soon as votes have been tabulated following the close of the contest at 9 P. M. this coming Saturday night.

Disregard All Former Vote Schedules

The final vote scale and second payment vote scale printed below are the only ones that will govern the tabulation of votes from now until the close of the campaign. They include regular votes as first announced and extra votes in the ratio of 80,000 to each $20 worth of new subscriptions.

FINAL VOTE SCALE

The final vote scale tabulated in accordance with the original announcement of the campaign, is in effect until the close; remittance sheets should be marked accordingly.

RISE IN STOCK MARKET PRICES IS MARKED BY SELECTIVITY

Group Recoveries Range From Zero to 100 Per Cent

Leaders Are Tobaccos, Utilities, Radio and Amusements, Machinery and Railroad Equipment, Electrical Apparatus and Chemicals.

By IRVING FISHER
(Professor of Economics, Yale University).
Special to The Washington Post.

New Haven, Conn., March 30.—The charge of lack of intelligent discrimination during the recovery of prices from the stock market crash is heard little, if at all. The charge was untrue even before the crash. Leonard P. Ayres, and President Simmons of the New York Stock Exchange drew attention to evidences of selectivity during the nine months of 1929, while the stock prices were reaching their peaks. Mr. Simmons particularly commented on the "marked discrimination shown by investors in selecting certain issues and disregarding others." Even then the public was being guided by the skilled counsel of investment trusts and experienced financial investment services.

Crash Sifted Stocks.

No doubt the crash has accentuated this altogether helpful tendency. The market, as a whole, has made substantial recovery from its low point of November 13 last. But the groups of stocks have moved upward at widely different rates, and some, even, have gone actually below the low points registered last fall. The diverse rates of recovery of the different groups of stocks are shown below. The percentage of recovery in each case is the percentage which the points recovered since the low bear to the difference between the high and the low.

*Loss.

Manifestly the several groups have had widely different influences upon the advance. Those showing greatest recoveries are Radio and Amusement stocks, Chemicals, Tobaccos, Machinery and Railroad Equipment, Electrical Equipment and Utilities. The expectations of great future profits to be obtained from mergers and the upbuilding of power networks in the Utilities group caused its rise in price last summer to culminate later than the culmination in Industrials. The Utilities peak was reached September 24, whereas Industrials began to decline almost three weeks earlier. As the Utilities made a longer and steeper climb upwards before the break, they have likewise shown greater buoyancy during the period of recovery. Naturally, the ratio of the Utility prices to earnings is far higher than that of any other group; in fact, it never fell below twenty to one even during the crash, while the average ratio for Industrials at the market top was only 13½ to 1.

Rates of Gain Vary.

Tobaccos and Amusements have shown themselves very nearly "depression-proof." Railroad equipment companies have been favored by recent large orders from the railroads; partly, no doubt, in response to the appeal of the administration to speed up production schedules as an offset to the shock on business produced by the market crash. Chemicals, in a new and rapidly-expanding industry that promises large profits in future, have come back more quickly than many of the more seasoned groups.

Overproduction is the bane which has prevented rapid recovery of oils, auto accessories, motors and coppers. Stores, also as a group, have been affected by the business recession.

As the varying rate of increase in group stock prices gives evidence of selectivity, so also does that of prices of individual stocks. In my list of 50 market leaders week-to-week, certain stocks recur as consistently the most active. Of these I have chosen at random several for comparing changes in price, with due reference to changes in capital structure. This allowance is made by computing the market value of shares outstanding at the date of the high point of each security in 1929, at its low point, and at a recent date (March 20):

Among the oils, for instance, Standard of New Jersey has made a recovery of over 50 per cent in the loss from its high of last September; but Skelly has made only 26 per cent recovery, while Richfield Oil has improved by only 15 per cent. Commercial Solvents, with a relatively less satisfactory showing, has recovered 28 per cent of the ground lost last fall, while recoveries of from 40 to 50 per cent are general throughout the group.

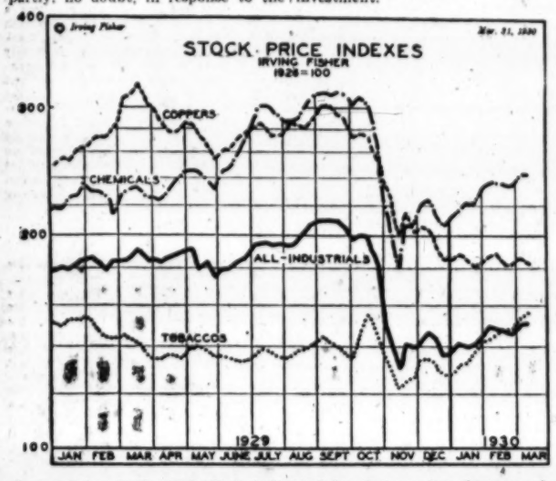
Motors, Stores, Sluggish.

Motors, on the other hand, have been generally sluggish. Companies specializing in passenger vehicles have shown less tendency to come back than those specializing in commercial vehicles; in the commercial division one stock has regained one-third of the loss sustained last fall. The group of stores stocks has been held back by the business depression, one having recovered only 11 per cent, yet individual stores show rebounds of 20 per cent or more.

Again, selectivity is at work in steels, which show recoveries ranging from 30 to 40 per cent. Copper shares this year sagged lower than the panic low, and on March 20 showed a 1 per cent loss from that figure; yet one copper company has made a recovery of 77 per cent of the loss between its high and low last fall.

Even among the most buoyant groups, namely, tobaccos, electrical equipment, theaters and utilities, great diversity is manifest. Doubtless the rapidly increasing rate of consumption of tobacco in its various forms accounts for the outstanding recovery in tobacco stocks. Yet in this group, also, selectivity is at work, one tobacco company on March 20 showing recovery from the loss last fall by 100 per cent, another by 59 per cent, while a third was 1 per cent below the last year low.

As usual, after a market panic, the bond market has distinctly improved since the November crash. But there has likewise been a notable increase in the number of common shareholders in many companies, while the recent pronounced rise in brokers' loan accounts show the rising confidence of the public in a recovering stock market. But it is a "choosy" public, a public that gains courage from counsel, and that is showing marked discrimination in its choice of shares for trading and investment.



A "creeping bull market" is indicated by the varying degrees of recovery of different groups of stocks from the 1929 low.

Slight Recession Noted in Bonds

Trading in New York Shows Downward Trend in Values.

Following the sharpest rise in the bond market (100 on March 5 to 101.6 on March 21) since the reaction following the November crash, the market remained firm and broad last week, with the gain in the weekly average of 0.2 per cent, although slight weakening disclosed a loss of 0.4 per cent at the week's close.

Of the 70 bonds in the Fisher Index, 59 per cent receded, 20 per cent showed no change, and 21 per cent rose.

Trading in bonds on the New York Stock Exchange showed a downward trend of average daily values below the preceding week's high level, with a decrease of 24 per cent. The largest losses were in first grade rails. Industrial bonds, which failed to share in the recent rise, were the only group to advance last week, with a slight gain of 0.04 per cent. New bond issues last week totaled $122,288,000, against $20,684,000 of new stocks.

Motor Car Dividends Nearly Billion.

$855,460,417 in dividends have been paid out in the past five years by the six leading motor car companies listed on the stock exchange. The companies are General Motors, Packard, Nash, Chrysler, Studebaker and Hudson.

New Use Found for Petroleum.

The production of liquefied petroleum gas is one of the lesser known developments of the oil industry. It is a natural gas and is used widely in domestic and industrial centers where — is not already available.

Cold Halts Seeding Spring Wheat Belt

Work in the spring wheat belt was interrupted last week on account of the generally colder weather. In Montana and the Dakotas, and on the Eastern slope in Colorado, some plowing went forward and seeding was done locally, but for the most part high winds and snow squalls delayed activity.

Winter wheat contained fair progress, with irregularity still reported from the Ohio Valley and lack of moisture in the Southwest.

NEW BULL MARKET SEEN AS EMERGING

Rise Since 1929 Crash Is Greater Than Made in 1927 and 1928.

GROUPS ARE NEAR HIGHS

By H. B. BROUGHAM
(Irving Fisher Service).

Few realize the rapidity with which the recovery of stock prices from the bottom of the market crash last November has taken on the significance of a bull market. The Fisher index of Industrial common stocks stood at 159.2 on March 28, a rise of 29.7 per cent from 122.7, the bottom of the crash, November 13, 1929. The preceding low was 121.1 for October, 1927, whence it rose to 150.4 for September, 1928, a gain of 29.1 per cent for a year of the long bull market. That means that within only four and one-half months from the crash common industrial stocks have risen on the New York Stock Exchange higher than during the whole year October, 1927-September, 1928. At 159.2 on Friday last, a new high for industrials was recorded since the break.

This was during a week when brokers' loans decreased, denoting that stock tradings of shares rising from 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 daily were in strong hands.

The steels group rose last week to the level of the week ended June 28, 1929, just before the culminating bulge of the long bull market. At that time steels had gained 30 per cent of the points made from May 31, at 170.7, to their high on September 3, at 256.8. Utilities stood last week at the level of July 9, 1929, where they had gained 37 per cent of their spectacular rise between May 27 and September 24, their high for all time. The electrical group rose last week to the level of June 28, chemicals to the level of June 16, radio and amusement stocks rose to the level of October 23.

On March 11, last, tobacco stocks stood at 157.7, only 0.1 point below their high for all time before the crash.

Utilities, steels and electrical, chemical, motors and accessories stocks closed last week at their high points, respectively, since the panic. They belong to fifteen of the twenty groups that rose last week.

Record Values Reported.

Daily trading in common industrial shares last week rose by 20 per cent to $198,700,000, the record average this year. Daily tradings in all stocks likewise gained by 19 per cent to a total of $256,400,000, also the high for this year. On March 26 tradings reached the record total of $286,900,000.

Fifteen groups rose, among which were utilities, by $11,600,000; steels, by $8,700,000; coppers, by $7,700,000; chemicals, by $4,900,000, and oils, by $4,200,000. Six groups fell slightly.

Trading in utilities on March 26 reached a high since October 29, at $87,500000; motors and coppers reached 1930 highs March 21 and 27, respectively.

Rises on Foreign Exchanges.

European low money rates were reflected in sharp gains in average stock prices last week on the London and Berlin exchanges, with Berlin gaining 3.9 per cent; this compensated for the heavy loss of the preceding week, that recorded a new low level of 83.0. In London, where prices have moved upward for three weeks, a gain of 1.1 per cent was recorded last week—4.7 per cent above the recent low of 93.0 on March 7.

Paris stock prices sagged last week by 0.1 per cent, following the 2 per cent gain of the preceding week.

The index of 225 industrial common dex is weighted by shares outstanding, representative $100 worth of stocks in 1926 would now amount to if held unchanged since that year. This index is weighted by shares outstanding. The index of "50 most active," or market leaders, shows the result of reinvesting the $100 every week in the market favorites of that week. This index is weighted by shares traded, the lost changing weekly. The last column of the table gives the average yield per cent on these weeks' 50 leaders at current prices.

Investment stocks rose last week by 3 per cent, substantial gains being made by U. S. Steel, Du Pont, American Car & Foundry, General Electric, American Radiator and Allied Chemical & Dye. The group as a whole corresponded to average prices June 25, 1929, when the bulge of last summer began.

Semiinvestment stocks rose last week by 1.2 per cent, to a gain of 24 per cent since the November crash, but 16 per cent below May 31, 1929, the low before the break.

Speculative stocks gained by 1.4 per cent last week, when they had risen 35 per cent over the November 13 bottom; they were still 23 per cent below May 28, 1929, the low point before the crash.

These three groups closed last week at the high since November 13.

Hungary Benefits By Use of Tobacco

Budapest, March 30 (A.P.).—Government figures reveal that $29,000,000 of the national revenue of Hungary comes from the sale of tobacco, amounting to 18 per cent of the total.

The sales in 1929 were enough to supply 15 cigars and 252 cigarettes to each man, woman and child in the country.

Prosperity Increases Population.

An interesting economic fact is that prosperity among the poorer classes tends to increase the population, while prosperity among the more wealthy classes tends to decrease it.

Chronic Weakness In Food Continues

Index Has Been Declining Steadily in Last Six Weeks.

The further fall of the all-commodity price index last week was due to chronic weakness in the agricultural division, which fell off by 0.83 per cent to 93.1. This index has declined steadily for the past six weeks, and has now reached the low since April, 1927. The principal cause of this drop was the foods group, most of the items coming under the head of finished goods. The items were bread, butter, flour and lard.

Some cause for cheer was found in the raw materials and semifinished groups, which showed rises in the nonagricultural division. Cotton, tin and lead were conspicuous risers. Hides and leathers, metals and building materials ceased to decline. The raw materials index was up by 0.58 per cent, while the semimanufactured index rose 0.33 per cent.

German and French indexes rose by 0.1 per cent last week to continue their slight, but definite, upward trend. The English index failed to improve over its record low of the week before.

COMMODITY PRICES LEVEL DISAPPOINTS

62 PER CENT SHOW DROP

The wholesale commodity price index continued downward last week, failing to make good the favorable indications of the preceding week for an early rise. The index declined 0.3 per cent to a new low of 90.4, following the slight fall of 0.2 per cent the week ended March 21.

The greatest cause for disappointment lay in the fact that, of the commodities showing any change, there were 44 per cent making rises as against 62 per cent registering falls. The week before looked hopeful because there were 56 per cent rises to 44 per cent falls.

The purchasing power of the dollar, reciprocating the continued weakness of commodity prices, accelerated its upward pace somewhat and reached an index of 110.6 last week.

WORK OF NATS' PITCHERS SPURS TEAM'S CONFIDENCE

A.A.U. Boxers Seek Titles Tonight

Evenly-Matched Bouts Expected; Tucker vs. Wolfgram.

To the tune of the leather lullaby, which may or may not be heard distinctly far from ringside, 14 Washington "Simon pures" tonight will battle for the glory of being champion boxers of the District of Columbia Association of the A. A. U. This glove throwing for glory—and glory is absolutely the only reward they'll receive—will be on display at the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q streets northwest, starting at 8 o'clock.

Owing to restrictions in local laws, the winning contestants will not be awarded any material prizes, while the District Association and the J. C. C. will not be allowed to reap any financial benefit. Admission charges are taboo.

Although spectators will be admitted free of charge, the committee has placed a limit on the admission, ruling that only members of the host club and invited guests will be passed through the doors. The small seating capacity of the J. C. C. auditorium will undoubtedly be taxed.

Evenly Contested Bouts Anticipated.

Evenly-contested bouts are anticipated in the main with a posibility of a knockout or two being considered by close observers of the tournament, which passed through the preliminary and semifinal stages last week at the City Club and Knights of Columbus Hall.

Seven titles will be contested, the light heavyweight championship being omitted from the usual A. A. U. boxing program. Only one candidate for the light heavyweight honor was entered, and he—Leroy Bordeau, of Georgetown University, 1929 South Atlantic champion—was prohibited from competing under a university ruling against competition of Hilltop athletes for outside organizations. He filed his entry as a member of the Jewish Community Center.

In the opening bout, Pat Sullivan, son of James A. Sullivan, second vice president of the District Association, will oppose Maynard Nathanson, J. C. C., in the flyweight class. Young Nathanson formerly played quarter back on the Central High School eleven.

The bantamweight title will be contested by Angie Tardugno, J. C. C., and Doug Swetman, City Club. Tardugno is a brother of Mike, the clever featherweight of Georgetown University's team. The dope favors Angie.

Barber and Ryon To Clash.

Nevin Barber, Knights of Columbus, who defeated Mike Tardugno last year, will seek the featherweight championship at the expense of John Ryon, City Club, who has a reputation for being a game scrapper. Barber's experience is expected to carry him through on top.

The lightweight title is certain to fall to the Jewish Community Center as both of the principals, Jocko Miller and Max Kosof, are J. C. C. color bearers. Miller last year won the South Atlantic title in his class, while Kosof, a newcomer to local amateur ranks, has campaigned successfully in his native State, New York.

Neither contestant in the welterweight bout has been seen in tournament action previously. They are Eric Sonnichsen, K. of C., and William Miller, City Club, both of whom advanced to the finals on byes or defaults.

A stirring slugging bout is looked for between the middleweight finalists, Gus Mirman, J. C. C. southpaw, and Henry Irving, City Club veteran. The heavyweight championship will be sought by W. L. Tucker, a protege of Goldie Ahearn, and Russell Wolfgram, City Club.

WOMEN GOLF STARS PLAY TODAY

Glenna Collett Choice in North-South Amateur.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 30 (A. P.).—One hundred and ten feminine golfers, the largest number to compete in the 28-year history of the event, will set out tomorrow on the eighteen-hole qualifying round of the women's North and South amateur tournament.

The entry list is a compilation of names famous for years past—some of them for two decades—in American links history. Glenna Collett, national champion, will defend her title.

Among Miss Collett's challengers, in addition to a host of younger stars, are Mrs. Ronald H. Barlow, of Philadelphia, who was runner-up in the national championship event 21 years ago, and Mrs. O. S. Hill, the golfing mother from Kansas City, Mo.

Miss Collett Favored To Win.

Pretournament speculation favored Miss Collett to retain her title and gave the leading challenger's place to Maureen Orcutt, brilliant star from Haworth, N. J. Miss Orcutt nosed out Miss Collett last week in the Southern Pines 54-hole medal play tournament.

Others looked upon as easy qualifiers were Helen Hicks, of Hewlett, L. I., Mrs. John Arends, of Chicago, and Miss Martha Parker, of New York, runner up as medalist in last year's tourney. Hard hitting Helen from Hewlett has been at Pinehurst the greater part of the winter and is thoroughly familia with the rolling course.

Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, who was defeated by Miss Collett in the finals last year, is another favorite.

The sixteen low scorers in tomorrow's qualifying round will begin match play Tuesday, the finalists meeting on Friday.

Lott Wins From Doeg In Florida Net Final

Miami Beach, Fla., March 30 (A.P.). George Lott, Chicago, fourth ranking amateur tennis player in the country, defeated Johnny Doeg, Santa Monica, Calif., third ranking player, in the finals of the South Florida tennis championships today. The scores were 2—6, 6—2, 4—6, 6—2 and 8—6.

IN THE COLLEGE CORNER

By JACK ESPEY

Up on the Hilltop, where stars shine, the luster of one Jimmy Kelly, heretofore just one of the field, is taking on added brightness. For the past three years Georgetown track followers have emphasized Wildermuth, Sexton and Adelman in their songs of praise.

Wildermuth and Sexton still hold their brilliance. Adelman has graduated. Now comes Kelly, quite unobtrusively, by the way, gaining popularity among the observers through his feats of running. It is more on account of his versatility than anything else.

Kelly, formerly of Devitt Perp and a native of Philadelphia, started out this year as a half-miler, a member of the 2-mile relay team. He ran the anchor leg and aided conspicuously on a couple of Georgetown 2-mile victories. Next he ran 1,000 yards and finished third behind Dr. Paul Martin and Ray Conger.

Ricca Sprains His Ankle.

of the 1-mile team, sprained his ankle on the eve of a big race in Madison Square Garden, and Kelly was put in his place. Kelly fulfilled the trust and helped G. U. to score a record-making victory. The time—3:23.2—tsands as the fastest ever made by a mile team on the Madison Square track. It was bettered only by the Harvard Team, which turned in 3:20.6 on another oval in the I. C. 4-A meet.

Less than two weeks later Kelly helped in shattering a record for the fourth-fifths mile relay in the West Virginia meet at Morgantown. The distance run by each individual was 352 yards.

Kelly has two more years of competition in college. Hilltop observers say his star is just beginning to shine.

A Baltimore paper, which admits Baltimore is the best lacrosse city in the country, says the reason why Maryland metropolis didn't get the game between St. John's of Annapolis and Oxford-Cambridge was that it didn't have any embassies at which tea could be served after the contest, which is to be played tomorrow at Central Stadium. And then it laughed at the idea of the St. John's players sipping tea.

Well, that's all right, Baltimore. It won't be T. N. T.

Leagues May Revive Interest.

Art Fox, retiring coach of the Williams College nine, suggests that the formation of leagues will revive interest in co[illegible] baseball. He was thinking particularly about college baseball in New England, but his suggestion could well be followed in the District.

Baseball at Maryland University is not being dominated by Washington boys as in the past. Only three Capital natives are holding down varsity positions regularly this spring. They are Julie Radice, first base; Bozie Berger, second base, and Charlie May, center field. George Phipps, Harry Milburn and Jack Batson, other Washingtonians, are among the varsity pitchers, however.

Ted Mitchell Names All-Time Teams.

Four members of the 1929-1930 Catholic University Boxing Team were good enough to earn positions on Coach Ted Mitchell's all-time C. U. Team. They are Johnny DePasquale, bantamweight; Chick Scuderi, featherweight; Rocco Blasi, welterweight, and Jack Malevich, heavyweight.

Al Moore, who ook 'em and gave 'em during the seasons from 1924 to 1927, is called the most polished boxer who ever wore the Brookland colors. He was a middleweight.

HEAVY CARD AHEAD FOR COLLEGES

Nine Baseball Games Listed This Week; C. U. in Debut.

THE first active week in local college baseball opens today with Catholic and Georgetown crossing bats with Dartmouth and Drexel, respectively, at Brookland Stadium and Washington Barracks. Both games will start at 3:30 o'clock.

By the end of the week, teams representing all colleges sponsoring the sport will have been seen in action. Gallaudet and Maryland being slated to open their respective campaigns on Thursday and Saturday. Gallaudet will play host to Vermont at Kendall Green and Maryland will take on Cornell at College Park. In all, nine games are on the week's program with eight listed for home diamonds.

Much interest centers upon the debut of the 1930 Catholic U. outfit, as early reports have it that the Cardinals will present a much stronger array than in 1929. With a new coach, Chick Gagnon, former Holy Cross star, and a general strengthening in every department through the acquisition of 1929 freshman stars, the C. U. Team, on paper, at least, looks like a winner.

Hurley Likely Mound Choice of Cards.

Lou Hurley, husky right-hander, will toe the slab for the Cards and Mike Marucci, midget sophomore star, will do the catching. The rest of the Brooklanders' line-up probably will be Lou Gioffre, first base; Johnny Oliver, second base; Joe Walsh, shortstop; Carl De Mello, third base; Ralph Dunn, left field; "Whitey" Peifer, center field, and Capt. Gene Murphy, right field.

Peifer, the center gardener, is a Washington boy, a graduate of Gonzaga High School. He is said to be one of the most promising fly chasers the Cards have boasted in several seasons. Not only does he judge fly balls well, but he possesses an accurate arm and a keen batting eye.

Georgetown to Seek Fifth Straight.

Georgetown will be out to score its fifth consecutive victory in the fray at Washington Barracks. Bill Lomax, who saved Saturday's game with Dart-

British United Wins Soccer Final, 1-0

1,500 Watch Veterans Gain Post Trophy; Burton Stars.

By RICHARD S. TENNYSON.

AN inspired British United soccer team rose to its greatest heights yesterday to win the Washington and Southeastern District championship Cup tie tournament and The Washington Post Cup that goes with the victory. Marlboro was the victim of the Englishmen in a bitterly contested 1 to 0 match that required two extra periods to reach a decision.

The endurance and all around ability of the ageing British team was a surprise to its most ardent followers, but despite the brilliant game flashed by the entire team, it is doubtful if it would have gained its success had it not been for the spectacular individual efforts of Jess Burton at right back.

Throughout the game Burton halted Marlboro thrusts yards from the goal, and in the final extra fifteen-minute period, when the Marylanders were fighting gamely and desperately to equalize, the British having scored in the first extra period, Jess formed a one-man defense that brought exclamations of praise from the 1,500 or more fans who lined the field.

About five minutes of the first extra period had been played when the British United forwards stormed the Marlboro defense with fast passing and neat dribbling. Soon a scramble ensued near the Marlboro uprights and Ray Knights dumped a shot a little to the right of Binger. The ball struck a pebble, causing Binger to misjudge its bounce, and rolled under the upright for the only score of the game.

The game was but a minute old when the Englishmen launched a determined attack on the Marlboro goal. In this early offensive Jack Turner sent a fast high shot for the Maryland net, but Binger, the agile Marlboro goal keeper, made a beautiful save and passed the sphere over the crossplece.

Deck, Wells and L. Mitchell kept the hopes of Marlboro high down to the final whistle with powerful boots that frequently carried the game to the mouth of the British goal but it was seldom that Keep, who relieved D. Knight at goal, touched the ball as Life and Burton formed a stonewall defense.

Buck and Mitchell Star.

M. Buck and R. Mitchell, Marlboro full backs, did not suffer in comparison with their more experienced rivals as these youngsters were called on much more frequently than Burton and Life to stop shots. Incidentally the Marlboro backs were forced to stop more difficult thrusts than their opponents, as most of Marlboro's efforts were lofts from considerable distance out while Jack Turner, Smith and Ray Knight were slamming tricky boots at the Marlboro uprights from close quarters.

About midway the second half British United had a great opportunity to score when a penalty was given against Marlboro. Turner took the kick but in an effort to sneak it in the corner of the goal he booted wide and the leather rolled over the endline.

Marlboro had almost as good a chance in the second extra period when Keep caught a long kick from the toe of Deck and started to run with the ball, rugby football fashion. As soon as he had taken more than his legal two steps a foul was called and the Maryland boys had a free kick at the British goal just a few yards out. The United's defense braced and soon had the play back to midfield.

The Englishmen were forced to finish the game with ten men as late in the second regular half Boyd was injured and carried from the field. Already the ultimate winners had made two substitutions, the total allowed each team.

A summary of the game as it was played, despite its closeness, shows beyond a doubt that the British Eleven outplayed the Marlboro kickers because of its superior experience.

Carnera Signs to Meet Dempsey In September, Is Denver Report

Denver, March 30 (A.P.).—The Denver Post said today that Carnera, the huge Italian heavyweight, yesterday signed a contract to fight Jack Dempsey somewhere in the United States some time in September of this year. Dempsey's signature, however, is not yet affixed to the contract, according to the Post.

Mique Malloy, Chicago and St. Louis promoter, left here yesterday afternoon for Chicago with the contract signed by Carnera, the newspaper will say, and he expects to get Dempsey's name on the dotted line.

Carnera and his party of managers and trainers left here yesterday afternoon for Los Angeles. Friday night Carnera knocked out Jack McAuliffe, Detroit heavyweight, in two minutes and eighteen seconds.

Terms of the contract, the Post said, have not been divulged, but Malloy announced he was ready to guarantee a million dollar purse for the battle which would probably take place in Soldiers Field Stadium, Chicago.

Nats Defeated by Memphis, 3-2, as Hadley Goes Route

Cronin's Error Helps Minors; Nat Rally Falls Short.

By FRANK H. YOUNG

(Staff Correspondent of The Washington Post).

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 30.—Although Pitcher Irving Hadley, the first National asked to go the route this spring, did not pass his test with flying colors, being beaten by the Memphis Chicks, 3 to 2, his rating was fairly high, as he granted but eight hits, and two of the alien runs, although the result of clean hitting, would not have been scored but for a costly error by Shortstop Joe Cronin.

The Chicks were fortunate in getting extra bases on five of their safeties and in two different innings a brace of doubles were clustered. Hadley fanned five and walked six during the pastime.

Tony Welzer, who used to pitch for the Red Sox, started against the Nats and hurled shut-out ball for five frames, during which he yielded but two hits. Both of the Washington runs, made after Johnny Walker had succeeded Welzer were tainted, two errors giving the Nats a start in the seventh.

Campbell, with a double and two singles, was high gun of the game, with Sam Rice getting two of the hits credited his team.

Welzer Nips Them At First.

Welzer's deceptive motion prevented the Nats from cashing in on a hit and pass in the second, both Judge, who had singled, and Bluege, who had walked, being picked off first base and then Cronin came through with an error in the lower half of the frame which paved the way for the Chicks to score twice. With two gone, the Nat shortstop fumbled Daughtry's easy roller. Then the Memphis battery got into action. Catcher Campbell doubling Daughtry home and scoring a moment later on Pitcher Welzer's two-base clout over Barnes head.

It looked as though the Nats might do a little run-making in the next canto when Cronin led off with a single and Ruel followed with a pass. Hadley filed to left, however, and then the flash Kamper-Williams-Brazill combination turned Loepp's grasser into a double play.

Doubles Add Run For Chicks.

In the fifth, the Chicks had another to their total, successive doubles turning the trick after two were out, when first Waddey and then Brazill poled out drives over the fly chasers heads. After scratch singles by Loepp and Rice had been wasted in the sixth the Chicks again made threatening gestures. Daughtry led off with a triple and, after he had held third while Campbell was rolling to Gharrity, Hadley packed the aisles by franking the next two up. With the infield in Tangemann lined to Cronin, who doubled up Daughtry at third.

Two errors, both while Hayes was up, helped the Nats to their first score in the seventh. After Catcher

A's to Repeat After Hard Race, Says Connie Mack

PHILADELPHIA, March 30 (A.P.). Connie Mack, back home today after nearly two month in the South, is all set for the baseball season to open.

Deeply tanned and looking fit, the 67-year-old manager of the Athletics came here direct from Fort Myers, Fla., while the A's, directed by Capt. Eddie Collins, will play several exhibition games, arriving in time for the city series with the Phillies beginning Saturday.

Mack declared his team was in fine condition. He is confident the A's will again finish out in front, but thinks it won't be a runaway race.

"The club has been strengthened with the addition of some promising rookies," Mack said. "We were rather fortunate with our new players. The infield recruits, McNair, Williams, Keesey and Tarr, will amount to something, I think. And we have three good pitching prospects in Mahaffey, Liebhardt and Mahon. They have shown plenty of stuff dwon South and have impressed me. Cramer, a new outfielder, also shows much promise."

Robins Divide Spoils With Toronto.

Clearwater, Fla., March 30 (A.P.).—The Brooklyn Robins divided a pair of 2-to-0 shut out exhibition games with the Toronto Maple Leafs, of the International League, today. Toronto won the seven-inning opener on an unearned counter and Burke's home run, as each team got only four hits. The Robins collected eleven hits in the second game while the Leafs were getting only another quartet of blows off Vance and Elliott. Wright hit a homer for Brooklyn.

Goldman Shines as Indians Score.

New Orleans, March 30 (A.P.).—Aided by excellent pitching from Wes Ferrell and Walter Miller, the Cleveland Indians defeated the New Orleans Pelicans in an exhibition game here today, 3 to 1.

Jonah Goldman, candidate for short stop with the Indians, gained generous applause when he handled ten fielding chances flawlessly. He was the only Indian to make two hits, and it was his two-bagger in the sixth that gave the tribe its only earned run.

Ferrell worked five innings, gave up three hits, and passed only one batter, while Miller allowed but two blows. The Indians could collect only seven hits.

Nats' Hits Timely; Judge Now Suffers From Cold.

By FRANK H. YOUNG

(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 30.—Despite the fact that they have been stacked up against minor league opponents and realize it, the Washington players are fast beginning to believe in themselves and the remark, "I believe that we are going to have a real team this year," is frequently heard around camp these days.

While the Nationals have not been getting as many hits as they should, they have managed to get their share at timely moments, which, after all, is what counts.

As their 1930 fate will depend largely upon how their pitchers stack up, it might be interesting to see just what the moundmen have been doing in games played so far this season. Excluding this afternoon's fracas, alien swatsmiths have been held to 30 safeties in 60 innings, and it must be admitted that an average of but one bingle in every two frames is not bad, even against bush league batters. And this would have been even better but for Carlos Moore having an exceptionally bad start against the Birmingham Barons, last week, when he granted eight hits and six runs in three innings. Moore since has turned in three frames of hitless ball, which puts him back in the running.

The records, excluding today's game, show that Bob Burke has done the most effective hurling. He has granted but four hits and two runs in eleven innings, while fanning fifteen and walking five. Ad Liska has gone twelve frames with only four hits granted, but these were turned into as many runs.

Lloyd Brown Pitches Runless Ball.

Lloyd Brown has not yet been scored upon, while yielding three safeties in nine frames while Myles Thomas and Irving Hadley are the only others who have served goose eggs on their menus during the first seven games.

The figures are:

	G.	I.	H.	R.	S.	B.
Burke	3	11	4	0	1	3
Liska	3	12	4	4	3	3
Hadley	3	7	3	0	1	2
Marberry	3	7	4	3	3	3
Brown	3	9	5	0	1	3
Thomas	2	7	4	0	1	1
Moore	3	7	6	3	1	3
Totals	18	60	30	13	32	19

In baseball, a player often gets a break in the matter of the club which first signs him. Take the case of Jack Hayes, for instance, he is generally regarded as a first-class second baseman, and there is no doubt but what he would be a regular with at least four other clubs in the American League. But he is being forced to do bench duty with the Nats simply because Myer has proven himself to be the better hitter, and a punch is one thing which the Nats need and must favor when it comes to choosing between candidates.

Joe Judge Suffers From Cold.

Captain and Acting Manager Joe Judge came down with an exceptionally bad cold this morning, due to the chilly and damp weather which the Nats have struck practically ever since they left Biloxi. At the games here, both yesterday and today, overcoats were needed. It is an odd thing that few were seen in the stands, however, the natives taking the view that this is the Sunny South, so it must be warm. Apparently, they would rather die of pneumonia for dear old Dixie than to admit that it is cold, irrespective of what the theremometer has to say on the subject.

The Nats are scheduled to return to Chattanooga on a night train where they will start their final week's training. The schedule calls for open dates tomorrow, and Tuesday a final joust with Engel's Lookouts on Wednesday, an open date Thursday, a two-day trip to Birmingham for games there on Friday and Saturday, and then a final Chattanooga appearance against the Boston Braves on Sunday.

The two big league outfits will start North that night, making four stops en route, parting company at Richmond after their meeting there on April 10.

Bobby Jones Opens Tourney Season Today; Turns in 69

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 30 (A.P.). Bobby Jones showed a 69 in a practice round over the Forest Hills-Ricker course here today and thus served notice on the contingent of professional shooters that the Atlanta amateur was ready for his second battle of the year with the cash players.

Jones' card was just one stroke above the record for the course, held by Ernest Ryall, professional at the club, who is also entered in the two-day $5,000 Southeastern open golf tournament, which starts here tomorrow.

Virtually all of the more than threescore golfers who plan to participate in the tournament engaged in practice rounds over the courses.

The first 36 holes tomorrow will be over the hill course at the Country Club where 72 represents par for the rolling layout. The championship rounds are to be fought over the Forrest Hills-Ricker course Tuesday.

Lack of a putting touch cost Jones the victory in the Savannah open in February, but the Atlanta golfing barrister has his carpet shots rolling true now and is ready for the fray.

Bobby went out in 35 and came back in 34 for his low score, collecting three birdies on the way and sinking several difficult putts of more than 20 feet.

Playing in a foursome today with Jones were Al Espinosa, of Chicago; Gene Sarazen, of New York, and Ed Dudley, of Wilmington, Del. Jones and Dudley paired to beat the veteran pair of money players, 3 and 2.

Dudley had a 74 for the round, while Espinosa had 77 and Sarazen 74.

Young Paul Runyan, the "dark horse" entry, who won the North and South open at Pinehurst, N. C., Friday, was also on hand today. He was perfecting his strokes in the hope of crashing through the veteran again with another important victory.

Crowds See Training at Bowie; Today Is Raceless in U. S.

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

THIS being the only weekday in the twelve month period when there is no racing in the United States, the devotees of the ancient sport are quite at a loss how to pass away a day which to them might have just as well been left off the calendar.

It will not be so dull, however, at Bowie Race Track, where the training is going ahead energetically, with all the horses out that could be crowded on the track. The weather has been open and reasonably warm, and horsemen have taken full advantage of it to prepare their charges for the beginning of the Eastern racing season at this track tomorrow. There were so many spectators at the track yesterday that all that was needed to start off a race meeting was a brace of pari mutuel machines and a starter.

Much Interest in Inaugural.

The Inaugural Handicap at Bowie is to the East what the Lincolnshire is to English racing—the first of the flat speed contests. Your correspondent was fortunate enough to get advance information on the weight allotments for the Inaugural, which features the opening day here.

Rapid Transit, king of the sprinting division racing at Miami the past winter, has been assigned top weight of 120 pounds for the 7 furlongs dash.

The official list of weights announced by Joseph McLennan, racing secretary, follows:

Rapid Transit, 126 pounds; Paul Bunyan, 124 pounds; Gun Royal, 122; War Instigator, 117; Wellet, 117; Dinah Did Upset, 117; Inception, 115; Searcher, 115; Genuine, 114; Stand By, 112; Clean Play, 112; Crystal Domino, 112; Pennant Lass, 110; Star o' Morn, 110; Ormonbird and Mr. Desmond, 105 each; Judge Dixon, 104; Colossal, 103; Kadiak, 102; Parnell Bound, 100, and Trickey Colonel, 95.

McLennan Judiciously Assigns Weights.

It will be seen at a glance that the Inaugural will be a slashing race, and Mr. McLennan has judiciously balanced weights to match the horses.

Stake features for the 35 days of racing at Bowie, Havre de Grace and Pimlico, with last year's winners of the fixtures in brackets, follow:

Eagles Trip Woodlawn To End Banner Season

The Skinker Bros. Eagles yesterday ended their most successful season with a 42-to-31 victory over the Woodlawn Athletic Club Five, thus clinching the Independent Pro League title. The season was highly successful, both on the court and financially, Manager Bernie Peacock announced. The Eagles lost two games through a hard schedule to the East Arlingtons, of Baltimore, and the French Athletic Club.

Ralph Bennie, Joe Sweeney and Jack Pober did most of the scoring for the Eagles yesterday, Ryan and Hess shone for the Virginians.

Woltz-Montrose, G. W. Cubs-Boatmen Battle in A. A. U. Tournament Tomorrow

The Woltz Photographers, defending District A. A. U. champions, meet the Montrose Five at Tech High tomorrow night in the semifinals of the District A. A. U. championship tournament. The G. W. Freshmen play the Potomac Boat Club on the same program. Members of the Woltz team pictured above are: (Left to right, back row) Bill Banta, Bucky Buscher, Jack Forney, Carl MacCartee. (Front row) Litchliter, Walker, Thurston Dean, Fones.

J. C. C. Flashes Meet St. John's in Semi-Final Contest.

FOUR hours of the most spirited basket ball ever witnessed here is expected to materialize at the Tech High Gymnasium tomorrow night when the District A. A. U. stages the semifinals of the unlimited class, a 130-pound class semifinal, and the final of the 100-pound class in its championship tournament which is sponsored by The Washington Post.

The Woltz Photographers, defending District champions, meet the Montrose quintet, composed of present and past Western High stars, and the George Washington University Freshmen face the Potomac Boat Club in the two crucial unlimited battles. The survivors of these clashes will square off for the championship on Wednesday night.

In addition, the Jewish Community Center Flashes and the St. John's Victors meet in the 130-pound class semifinal and the J. C. C. Spartans and the Boys Club Optimists, teams representing two of the basket ball incurbaters of the city, battle for the 100-pound crown.

Nominal Admission Fee of 25 Cents.

Court fans can witness this outstanding basket ball program for 25 cents, the standard price of admission to A. A. U. games.

The Western High School group, reassembled by Manager Carrico of Montrose, will not lack supporters when it takes the floor against the Woltz combination. Those who saw Montrose spring the biggest upset of local tournament history in routing the J. C. C. "Big Five," 45-22, are confident that the Western players have the defensive ability and the scoring punch necessary to halt the tournament streak of the Photographers.

Keen interest has been manifest in the play of the rival centers, many tournament followers believing that the outcome of the game hinges on the play of these rivals. They are Jack Forney, of Woltz, and Bob Freeman, of Montrose. Forney is perhaps the more finished player, but Freeman has superior height and reach and played one of the greatest games of his career in the J. C. C. upset.

Thompson Brothers With Montrose.

Among others, the Montrose Club is also depending on the Thompson brothers, Jimmie and Herbie. Both are deadly shots, as they have proved in both scholastic and independent ranks.

Jack Connor will lead his George Washington Freshmen against Potomac Boat Club. Connor, who was a member of a National A. A. U. championship five in the Middle West, is confident that his combination, which includes Forest Burgess of Central High fame; Billy Wells and Carlin, will take the title.

In three tournament appearances the Freshmen have won by large margins, but many see tonight's battle as a severe test.

The Potomac Boat Club has had the District title as its objective since the start of the season. After opening the campaign brilliantly, the team slumped toward the end of the league race, but its tournament games have witnessed a return to form that may carry it to the championship.

Flashes-St. John's May Steal Show.

The game that may steal the show is that between the J. C. C. Flashes, who have Understein, Korman, Cordova, Goldberg and other young stars, and the St. John's Quintet, which includes the Scanlon brothers, Augusterfef, Gallagher and the others. These 130-pound semifinalists appear on a basket ball par and should stage a brilliant exhibition. The winning team meets the Westerners for the title on Wednesday's program.

The records of the 100-pound finalists, both in and out of the tournament, point to a great battle between the Spartans and Optimists. Fans who are not on hand for this game which starts at 7 o'clock may miss one of the best battles of the night.

Wednesday night, the unlimited, 130, 115 and women's finals are scheduled.

Brooklyn, Philadelphia In Y.M.H.A. Court Final

Newark, N. J., March 30 (A.P.).—Brooklyn and Philadelphia gained the final round of the national Y. M. H. A. basket ball championship here this afternoon. Brooklyn defeated Paterson, 39 to 35 and Philadelphia conquered Pittsburgh, 37 to 26. The finals were to be played tonight.

NATS BEATEN, 3-2, BY MEMPHIS CLUB

Campbell muffed his foul, Hayes lined to right and Waddey let the drive go through his hands, giving the runner three bases. Gharrity doubled Hayes home, and after the next two had been easy outs, registered on Ruel's single over second.

Walker found himself in the same predicament in the eighth as had Hadley in the alien sixth, and his infield pulled him out in almost identically the same manner. After Loepp flied to left, Rice singled and two passes filled the bases. With Nats only a run behind, the Chick fans were straining on the ends of their chairs with excitement. Gharrity, at bat, crashed one toward left. It had "hit" written all over it, but Daughtry made a fine leaping catch and easily beat Rice to the bag to end the inning and to kill what proved to be the last Washington threat.

Alexander Pantages Wins Agua Caliente Handicap

Agua Caliente, Mexico, March 30.—Jumping into a long lead after going 6 furlongs of the 2-mile distance, Alexander Pantages, from the Allo Carrodle Stable, today easily won the $10,000 added Agua Caliente Cup Handicap. The favorite, Scimitar, from the Agua Caliente Stable, finished five lengths behind in second place, while Wirt G. Bowman, from the stable of A. A. Baroni, was third.

The purse was worth $9,550 and a cup to the winner's owners; $1,500 to second; $1,000 to third, and $500 to fourth, Trieze. The winner paid $6.20 for a $2 mutuels ticket.

Well ridden by Jockey G. Woolf, Alexander Pantages opened up a good lead after going 6 furlongs and was never challenged. Scimitar followed closely but did not have the speed to catch the winner. Wirt G. Bowman was best of the others.

SENATORS WIN GAME.

The Neighborhood House Senators won their second game in as many starts yesterday by downing the Commerce Nine, 7 to 3. The Senators will engage the Bilfton Barbers next Sunday on East Ellipse diamond at 1 o'clock.

TWO SPRING TITLES HOPE OF EASTERN

Baseball and Track Sought; Stars Near Graduation.

By MIKE KELLEY
(Eastern High School Coach.)

ATHLETES representing Eastern High School may be expected to make a determined bid to capture the two remaining major championships in baseball and track, in order to duplicate their successes in these two sports last year. Tech has this year matched her achievement of 1929 by being returned the winner in both football and basket ball and Eastern has visions of again sharing the scholastic titles with the Maroon and Grey.

Incidentally these two spring sports will offer a final opportunity for many of Eastern's athletes, to help write the athletic history of their school, since June graduations are due to take quite a toll of the athletic material at that institution. Some sterling athletes of Eastern will be removed from local scholastic sport circles this season, and their places are going to be hard to fill.

Many Gridmen Graduate.

From the 1929 football squad, a host of capable men will be lost. Fourteen regulars are included in this line-up. Chester Miles and John Nally, centers; Hogge, Chamberlain and Montague, guards; Capt. Tom Nally and Moffett, tackles; Smith and Jenkins, ends, and Oxley, Miller, Hayden, Burns and McCullough, backs, are leaving this June.

Of the squad that represented Eastern on the basket ball court, Ryan, Robey and McCullough compose the regulars whose places will be vacant in the 1931 series.

The following track members are listed to enjoy their last season on the cinderpaths this coming campaign: Clow and Swope, quartermilers; Suter, half-miler; Frank and Chester Miles, milers; Jenkins, high-jumper; Farhood and Moffett, shot-putters; Oxley and Allison, javelin men.

Championship Nine Riddled.

Eastern's championship nine of 1929 was pretty well riddled by graduation last year since Shapiro, Ware and Eagle, the entire outfield is missing, as are Fisher, third sacker; Zahn, shortstop; Capelli, second baseman, and Hanna who twirled the four series games.

Of those most likely to gain regular berths this season, at least four, McCullough, Snyder, Hayden and Turner are seniors.

Thus 23 athletes, in all, will be found missing in action when the new school term begins in September out Capitol Hill way. Many of these boys, having participated in two sports, their loss will be doubly felt. One boy, McCullough, was a four-sport man last year.

EASTERN MIDGETS WIN.

A pair of home runs by Winters featured the Eastern A. A. Midgets' 14-to-4 victory over the Mardelle Juniors yesterday. The Easterns meet the Sam Wests next Sunday at 1 o'clock on the Plaza diamond.

A.A.U. Committee Perfects Plans for Title Swimming

FOLLOWING in the wake of the basket ball and boxing championships, the District A. A. U. swimming championships to be held on April 28 and 29 at the Ambassador Hotel Pool will be as successful as the preceding titular events if the efforts being made by the swimming committee bear fruit.

The committee, headed by D. Melville Carr, is leaving nothing undone in trying to make the forthcoming tournament appealing both to competitor and spectator. An attractive set of medals for the winners is being gathered, while one of the most conveniently located pools in the city has been obtained for staging the meet. Expert officials will be secured and all other details incidental to the conduct of the affair will be arranged in an approved manner, the committee promises.

A. A. U. championship medals are to be awarded the winners of the championship events, which are closed to amateurs residing within the territory of the District association. Trophies will be presented to the individual high-point scorers in the two divisions, men and women.

Novice Event on Program.

The Washington Swimming Club will donate a set of club medals to winners in the open events, namely, the 100-yard free style for novices, and the 200-yard relay for teams of four. The novice event is open to any registered amateur who has never won a prize in swimming competition. The relay event is open to any team of four registered athletes representing any member club of the A. A. U.

Registration may be made by applying to the registration committee chairman, William E. Russell, who lives at 1503 North Capitol street. All contestants must be registered and must have filed their entries by midnight of April 21 with D. Melville Carr, whose address is First Aid and Live Saving Service, American National Red Cross, Seventeenth and D streets northwest.

Cue Star Never Played Deliberate Safety Shot

Dr. Andrew J. Harris, of Chicago, twice holder of the national amateur three-cushion championship, has been playing billiards for more than 25 years and during that period he never made a deliberate safety shot. Three-cushions is a game in which effective safety play is considered an important part of the strategy.

During Dr. Harris' game against Max Shimon, the defending champion, recently at French Lick, Shimon made eight deliberate safeties, but Dr. Harris replied to each attempt with an effort to score. When asked why he did not answer Shimon's safety with a safety, he remarked:

"I have been playing this game for 25 years and I have never played a deliberate safety; I am not going to start now."

And that was the game in which Dr. Harris, trailing by 38 to 44, won by 50 to 47.

Fall River in Front In Title Soccer Race

New York, March 30 (A.P.).—Fall River, representing the East, swamped the Cleveland Hungarians, 7 to 2, in the opening match of the final round series for the national challenge soccer cup here today.

Fall River outplayed the Midwesterners from start to finish and never was threatened. Their attack completely baffled Cleveland in the first half and all seven Fall River goals were scored in this half.

The second game of the best two-out-of-three series will be played in Cleveland next Sunday.

French Feature Race To Rothschild's Nopal

Auteuil, France, March 30 (A.P.).—Baron Edouard de Rothschild's Nopal, 5-year-old son of Baycherry out of Flowershop, captured the first big feature of the 1930 Metropolitan season, today, finishing three lengths ahead of thirteen other starters in the Grand Prix Printemps, a hurdles handicap race at 2½ miles. Nopal, neglected in the betting, rewarded his backers at odds of 8 to 1. Allobroge was second and Fons Pertuis third.

FIRST GAME FRIDAY FOR WESTERN

To Meet Georgetown Prep; Is First School Team in Action.

BY playing its opening game next Friday against Georgetown Prep, Western High School's Baseball Team will get the jump on its inter-high rivals by being the first of the scholastic teams to break the monotony of daily training with actual combat. Next week Central, Tech and Eastern will play their opening game.

Business, which will not call out its candidates until Tuesday will be the last team to break into a game, playing its initial encounter on April 17.

For its baptism of fire on Friday, Western seems well-prepared notwithstanding a line-up which includes but two former regulars, Capt. Bob Freeman at shortstop, and Quincy Owens at second, are the only lads who have ever performed for the Red and White before, and the former will be playing out of position, inasmuch as he has always held forth at first base.

Fox Making Good At First Base.

However, the presence of Clarence Fox at the initial sack has led Coach Moore to make this shift, with the newcomer shaping up well at Freeman's old post. Completing the infield will be found George Clark at third, a sandlot player of whom great things are expected. In the outfield, Moore has decided to start Taylor, Fletcher and Tabler, although there is a possibility that Buscher and Draper, of basketball and football fame, respectively, will win berths by virtue of their lusty hitting.

Behind the bat, Moore has Towell, a second-stringer last year who has profited from the experience to just about clinch the receiving job and Samuels, a newcomer. Oliver, a midget, also looks capable. Payne, Poore, and Albert are shaping up as the likeliest hurlers, with the first-named assured of a regular job. Green, a youngster, is the only southpaw of the bunch.

As to the other schools, only Central seems to have any definite line on its candidates. At the end of Friday's workout, Coach Ty Rauber was driving an infield composed of Broadbent at first, Cumberland at second, Deveau at short, and Harrison at third. However, with White, Bradford and Miller making formidable bids for regular berths, the present line-up of the inner works is by no means assured.

Magby, Pitcher, May Shift to Outfield.

Thompson, Al and L. Miller, Deliaso, and Hall are among the flychasers impressing Rauber, while Kiernan and Waldemyer are shaping up as catchers. Embrey, Childress, Magby, and Cook, are taking turns on the hill, with all due to receive careful consideration. Magby, with plenty of hitting power, may be shifted to the outfield if he fails to make the grade as a hurler.

Eastern and Tech, the latter out for the first time last Friday, have made no attempt to pick their positions, both having more candidates on hand than it can handle. Mal Edward, Tech mentor, favors "those who can hit." Capt. Benny Spigel, pitcher, is setting a good example for this demand of his coach, daily clouting the ball in impressive fashion.

POTOMAC NINE WINS.

Collecting thirteen hits off the collective deliveries of three Rover A. C. hurlers yesterday, the Potomac Seniors scored a 10-to-5 victory the first time out. Harry Best gave seven hits and was never in trouble. Irving, Farrell and Driftmeyer led the hitters.

3 Titles Salvaged as D. C. Bowlers Give Up Monopoly

Special to The Washington Post.

WATERBURY, Conn., March 30. New England's duckpin bowlers proved inhospitable hosts during the third National Duckpin Bowling Congress tournament, completed here Saturday night after three weeks of steady performances on the Geniot's Recreation drives.

Washington men and women, who have monopolized the championships in the eight events in the past two tournaments won only the men's five-man and doubles crowns and the women's all-events title.

The men's singles and all-events championships went to New England stars, while the women's doubles title also went to two of the fair Northern representatives. The women's singles and team titles went to Baltimore women.

Two new tournament records were Lorraine Gulli's 1,091 all-events total is 74 pins better than any previous mark. The 1,632 team set of the Recreations, of Baltimore, is 66 pins better than the mark set by the King Pins last year.

Only the Baltimore Recreation Center's record 1,813 team set stood up in the men's events. Joe Mulroe and Paul Harrison bettered the doubles record by one pin. Jack Otto's 432 singles set betters the marks of Jack Whalen and Howard Campbell of last year by two pins. The sensational all-events total of Red Miller, 1,203, promises to stand for some time.

The claim made by the Clarendon team to first place in the men's team championship race has not been definitely acted upon by the congress officials. The Clarendon team claims that its score should be 1,807, and not 1,797, as listed in the records. If the claim is upheld, the Clarendon team will be awarded the team championship, dropping the Bethesda team into second place.

CAPITAL BOY ON JOHNNY TWELVE

Bob MacCartee to Be Seen in Lacrosse Game Tomorrow.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 30.—St. John's College's Lacrosse Team, national champion of 1929, is ready for its inaugural of the current campaign. While the great team of a year ago has been dismantled in the most part due to graduation, marriage and the college black list, Coach Dinty Moore, former Hopkins ace, expects his charges to get off to a flying start Tuesday afternoon.

Washington fans have been accorded the privilege of seeing the Johnnies in their debut against the combined teams of Oxford and Cambridge of England. The game is slated for 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in Central High School's Stadium and high officials of the United States and British governments will be present. A contingent of Annapolis fans will follow the Orange and Black racquet wielders to the National Capital.

MacCartee, Capital Boy, With St. John's.

The Johnnie starting line-up follows: Steves Wolanske, goal; Phil Lotz, point; Ed Lotz, cover point; Jim Morris, first defense; Ernie Cornbrooke, captain and second defense; Larry Carpenter, third defense; Walter Baird, center; Willis Lynch, third attack; Bill Zeigler, second attack; Bobby Pool, first attack; Bob Maccartee, out home, and Okey O'Conner, in home.

The game will be a home coming for Maccartee, all-around star athlete at St. John's. Maccartee, who formerly starred in Washington prep school circles, will again next season captain the St. John's Basket Ball Team. While he is an all-Maryland half back on the grid, Maccartee is just breaking into lacross, but his side-stepping and general coordination makes him a treat from the crease. He will be the player at the mouth of the goal. The St. John's Team is composed, in the main, of Maryland youths. Tomorrow the Johnnies will only have a light polishing drill on the attack.

Luray, Va., March 30.—Luray High defeated Culpeper High on the local diamond, 13 to 12. It was the second victory in as many starts.

Bishop, of the visitors, also collected three. Foltz, of the locals, was credited with the longest hit of the game, it being a triple in deep right.

It was a nip and tuck game throughout and L. H. S. was trailing by one run in the beginning of the ninth, but came through with a base on balls and two hits to win by one run. L. H. S. used three moundsmen, the Long brothers, who are twins, and Price, who pitched the last inning.

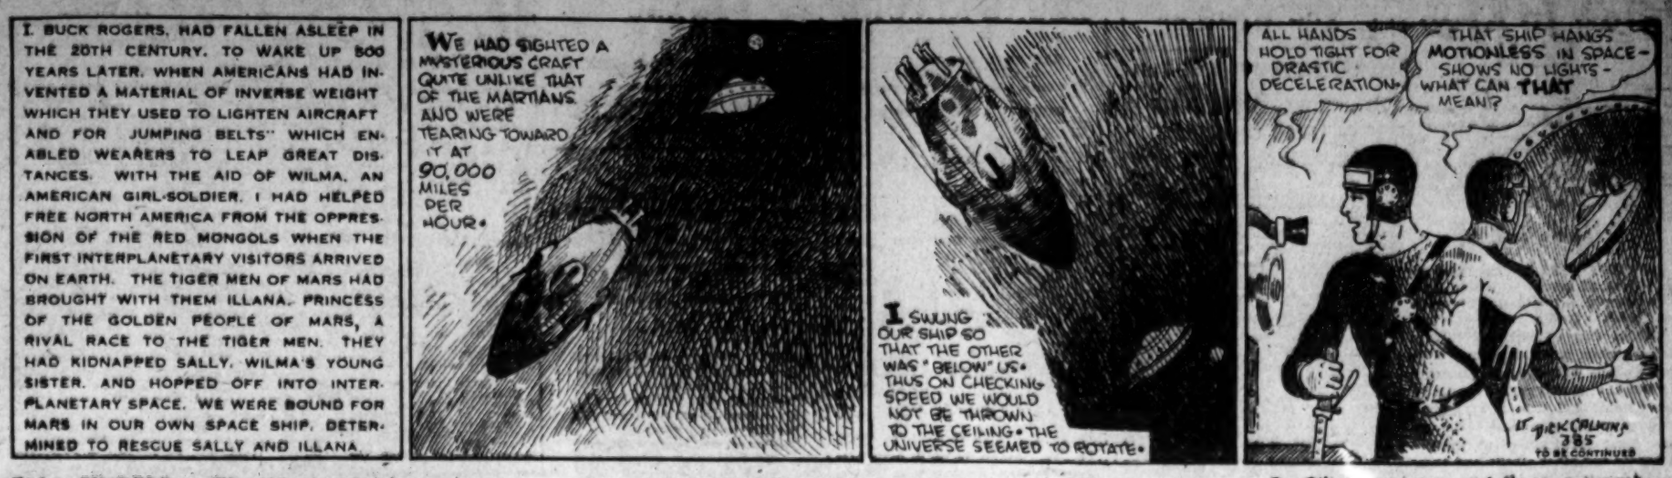
BUCK ROGERS, 2430 A. D. — Mysterious Ship Sighted — By Phil Nowlan and Dick Calkins



I. BUCK ROGERS, HAD FALLEN ASLEEP IN THE 20TH CENTURY. TO WAKE UP 500 YEARS LATER. WHEN AMERICANS HAD INVENTED A MATERIAL OF INVERSE WEIGHT WHICH THEY USED TO LIGHTEN AIRCRAFT AND FOR JUMPING BELTS" WHICH ENABLED WEARERS TO LEAP GREAT DISTANCES. WITH THE AID OF WILMA, AN AMERICAN GIRL-SOLDIER, I HAD HELPED FREE NORTH AMERICA FROM THE OPPRESSION OF THE RED MONGOLS WHEN THE FIRST INTERPLANETARY VISITORS ARRIVED ON EARTH. THE TIGER MEN OF MARS HAD BROUGHT WITH THEM ILLANA, PRINCESS OF THE GOLDEN PEOPLE OF MARS, A RIVAL RACE TO THE TIGER MEN. THEY HAD KIDNAPPED SALLY, WILMA'S YOUNG SISTER. AND HOPPED OFF INTO INTERPLANETARY SPACE. WE WERE BOUND FOR MARS IN OUR OWN SPACE SHIP, DETERMINED TO RESCUE SALLY AND ILLANA.
WE HAD SIGHTED A MYSTERIOUS CRAFT QUITE UNLIKE THAT OF THE MARTIANS AND WERE TEARING TOWARD IT AT 90,000 MILES PER HOUR.
I SWUNG OUR SHIP SO THAT THE OTHER WAS "BELOW" US. THUS ON CHECKING SPEED WE WOULD NOT BE THROWN TO THE CEILING. THE UNIVERSE SEEMED TO ROTATE.
ALL HANDS HOLD TIGHT FOR DRASTIC DECELERATION.
THAT SHIP HANGS MOTIONLESS IN SPACE—SHOWS NO LIGHTS—WHAT CAN THAT MEAN?

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

Kidney Stone.

A PERSON who has had one attack of kidney or ureter stone should regulate his life in a way that will prevent repetition which otherwise may be expected. To do this, whenever possible, he should secure a stone which has caused trouble and have it analyzed. Chemically these stones fall into three groups, those composed of uric acid and urates; those composed of phosphates, carbonate and other alkalis, and those composed of oxalates. The diet to be given and the other directions to be followed depend on the predominating crystals in the stone. If a stone passed on one occasion is composed of oxalic crystals, stones subsequently formed will have the same composition, and to prevent them the habits must be regulated on an antioxaluria basis.

To prevent oxaluria and the formation of oxalate stones requires several modifications of diet. First, foods rich in oxalates should be eliminated from the diet. Foremost among these is rhubarb or pie plant. This vegetable should not be eaten as a sauce or pie, or in any other way. Among the vegetables rich in oxolates are: sorrel, asparagus, and spinach. All of these foods should be dropped. Tea, cocoa, and chocolate also run high in this salt and should be eliminated. The best beverages are the various forms of milk and waters, preferably the mildly alkaline mineral waters. If coffee be taken it should be in limited quantities. Since the fruit acids, such as those of pineapples, lemons, oranges, apples, plums, prunes, apricots, peaches and cranberries sometimes fail to oxidize well, it is wise to eliminate such fruits and their products. If fruits be eaten at all they should be thoroughly ripened, preferably on the tree.

It is generally held that the colloids which serve as a glue to hold the crystals together as a stone are even more important in stone formation than the crystals themselves. Partly to control formation of this colloid material the diet should not contain much of starchy or sweet foods. This includes breads, pastries, cereals, desserts, sweets. Intestinal fermentations are to be avoided.

One of the worst offenders is pepper and the group of alcoholic beverages is another. The food should be free from pepper, mustard, horseradish and other condiments. No alcohol should be consumed.

Speaking now on the positive side, the diet should consist largely of meats of various kinds (fat and lean), eggs, milk in all forms, a moderate amount of bread, fats and greases, potatoes, cabbage, greens, lettuce, peas ad most vegetables and ripe, sweet fruits sparingly. Most authorities recommend drinking plenty of mild alkaline water. Some permit carbonated alkaline waters. Others do not.

FEET COLD ALL TIME.

P. S. writes: My feet are cold all the time, even when I am in a warm room or a warm bed. What makes them so cold and can I do anything for it? I am 38 years old.

REPLY

The common name for this is poor circulation. The symptoms are due to deficient blood in the skin of your feet. Back of it lies poor functioning of your vasomotor system, causing improper distribution of blood. Young people try to overcome it by a process of hardening, so called. This consists in bathing the feet in cold water, rubbing them with ice or with clean snow. This treatment is followed immediately by rubbing or by using warm water to get up a good, red glow.

Old people overcome the symptoms by wearing warm, very loose shoes, warm stockings and covering the feet well at night.

POSTOFFICE GROUND TO BE BROKEN TODAY

$80,000 Clarendon Building to Go Up; Arlington Societies to Meet.

HONOR ROLL ANNOUNCED

BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Ground will be broken today for the new Clarendon Postoffice Building by Carl E. Swenson under the supervision of Arthur C. McMillen, superintendent of construction.

The building will be erected at the intersection of Wilson boulevard and Wheeler avenue at an estimated cost of $80,000, with modern fixtures for the postoffice costing an additional $10,000. It will also contain two storerooms with offices on the second floor.

It will be of stone and steel construction and will provide twice the floor space of the present building now occupied by the postoffice. It is being erected by J. C. Spaulding, who has, it is understood, a ten-year lease from the Postoffice Department.

The executive committee of the Back to the District Association will hold a special meeting tonight in its headquarters in the Rucker Building at Clarendon, according to an announcement made last night by Richard L. Eacho, vice president. The meeting will be held at 7:30 o'clock and Vice President Eacho requests all persons interested to attend.

C. L. Kinnier, county engineer, formerly with the State Highway Department, is announced as the speaker for the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce in its program over station WJSV, Mount Vernon Hills, Va., Wednesday afternoon from 5 to 6 o'clock. Mr. Kinnier will take as his subject "Development of Roads in Arlington County."

The Arlington Fire Department will hold its meeting Wednesday night in its new hall, now under construction. Work on the building is being rushed in order that the department can entertain the Arlington-Fairfax Volunteer Firemen's Association the night of April 15.

With a number of special committee reports to be received, the April meeting of the Arlington County Civic Federation tomorrow night in the Lyon Park community hall promises to be one of unusual interest to those interested in the welfare and future progress of Arlington County.

Among those projects to be considered will be the proposed Federal postoffice building for Arlington County, the purchase of gasoline and oil by the county for the county volunteer fire departments, the plan for the reception of Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd on his return to the United States from Antartica, the Capper-Crampton bill, and a resolution creating two new officials of the federation, legal adviser and sergeant at arms. President William C. Hull requests that all delegates attend.

Arlington Chapter, No. 149, United Daughters of the Confederacy, will meet tomorrow night at the home of Mrs. Dorothea Vandersllice, 205 Beech street, Clarendon, at 8 o'clock.

The honor roll for Thomas Nelson Page School at Ballston as announced by the principal, Miss Daisy H. MANY LEGION BANDS SET FOR APPLE FETE

Marylanders Preparing to Be Represented at Virginia Festival.

PLAN FIREMEN'S FROLIC

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., March 30.—Bands and bugle and drum corps from many sections of Maryland are to march in the triumphal parade of her majesty, "Queen Shenandoah VII.," here the latter part of April when for two days the seventh annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival will be held in celebration of the blossoming of the 12,000,000 trees in commercial orchards of the Shenandoah - Cumberland - Potomac fruit district.

Returning today from a visit to Maryland cities and towns with several of his assistants, Nelson F. Richards, director general, said Marylanders were much enthused and interested in making contributions to the Winchester fete. Some of the bands and drum and bugle corps attached to American Legion posts will be here both days, while the greater number will participate only in the second day's parade, the largest and most colorful, in which the queen rides in state.

Mr. Richards said American Legion posts of Baltimore, Cumberland, Hagerstown, Frostburg and other cities of Maryland will be represented by uniformed members, bands and bugle and drum corps, and that posts in other cities and towns had invitations under consideration. Some of the largest money prizes raised by the festival organizations are offered to Legion posts with and without bands and bugle and drum corps. About a dozen Boy Scout organizations of nearby States have indicated their desire to march in the parade in honor of the festival queen.

The night of the first day will see a "firemen's frolic," in which volunteer firemen's organizations from many parts of the Cumberland and Shenandoah Valleys in Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia and Virginia will march.

The firemen's committee, meeting last night, urged participants to wear fantastic costumes and to enter floats which will depict the caricaturist's impressions of prominent people. The firemen's parade is to disband on the 70-acre Handley High School campus, where a banquet will be held in honor of visiting firemen in a circus tent, with the compliments of Winchester fire fighters.

Solid silver trophies will be given to the largest visiting company with band, the visiting company making the best appearance, the largest out-of-town company without band, and the visiting company appearing in the parade with the most comic features.

More Than $40,000 Lost in Farm Fire

Spectacular Blaze Attracts Crowds; 12 Cows, Nine Horses Perish.

A large fire illuminating the sky in the southern part of Prince Georges County for miles last night destroyed structures, live stock and miscellaneous property valued at between $40,000 and $50,000 on the large Poplar Hill Farm of Mr. and Mrs. P. Frank Tippett at Cheltenham, Md.

A large crowd was attracted from many nearby towns and communities. An alarm brought out the fire company from Upper Marlboro and the volunteer fire companies from both Capitol Heights and Riverdale.

Starting from an unknown cause apparently in the large barn about 300 yards from the residence, the fire had gained speedy headway when Mrs. Tippett observed the conflagration while returning from a nearby church to her home, where her husband was asleep. Fire companies were handicapped by lack of adequate water.

With the destruction of the large barn, twelve cows and nine horses were burned to death. There were also destroyed two sheds containing a large quantity of farm equipment; two corncribs, an automobile truck, two large automobiles and other property.

DATE SET TO MARK RELIGIOUS FREEDOM

Palm Sunday, Passover and Jefferson Birthday Fall on April 13.

PROGRAMS ARE PLANNED

New York, March 30 (A.P.).—The National Committee for the Celebration of Religious Freedom Day announced today that Sunday, April 13, would be observed jointly by religious freedom day and Thomas Jefferson's birthday, which falls this year on the same date as Palm Sunday and Passover.

The program suggested by the committee, of which President Hoover is honorary chairman, included the ringing of bells in schools, churches and public buildings throughout the country at 10 a. m. to "proclaim the blessings of religious freedom." Felix M. Warburg and Claude G. Bowers are chairmen of the committee.

The announcement said Jefferson's native city, Charlottesville, Va., is preparing for the national celebration to be held there both on the statesman's birthday and the preceding day. Founder's day exercises will be held Saturday at the University of Virginia, which Jefferson established, with the principal address by Dr. George E. Vincent, former head of the Rockefeller Foundation.

Sunday's celebration will be held on the hills overlooking Charlottesville, where Monticello, Jefferson's home, is preserved as a historic shrine. Speakers will include United States Senators Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, and C. C. Dill, of Washington.

Flowers will be placed on Jefferson's grave in the family burial ground. Bishop Collins Deny, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Rabbi Edward N. Calisch, of Richmond, Va., are to speak at this part of the ceremony, and Patrick Cardinal Hayes also had been invited to attend or to send some other outstanding member of the Roman Catholic clergy.

Charlottesville, Va., March 30 (A.P.).—Theodore Fred Kuper, secretary of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation, tonight said both major political parties and all principal religious sects will be represented in the Jefferson day celebration here, Sunday, April 13—religious freedom day—because the foundation is nonsectarian and because the day will be observed in memoriam to Jefferson's law for religious freedom.

CAMP BEING PICKED FOR FOUR-H BOYS

Sites Discussed at North Virginia Meeting at Culpeper.

FIREMEN TO ASSEMBLE

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Vienna, Va.
Clarendon 919-J-1.

County agricultural agents for northern Virginia met recently in Culpeper, Va., and made tentative plans for the camp for the members of the boys' 4-H Club in northern Virginia. The camp will be held during the summer. Two locations for the camp were discussed, after it was found that it would be impossible to have the camp at Swavely College at Manassas.

They will endeavor to locate the camp this year at Randolph-Macon College near Front Royal or at Wake Forest College near Orange, Va. The final decision will not be made until after further investigation. It was proposed to have the costs for the boys attending the camp placed at $3 a week, which would include meals and lodging. More than 100 boys attended the camp at Manassas last year, and more than twice that number have signified their intention of joining the camp this summer. County Agent Derr, of Fairfax County, will be in charge of poultry instructions at the camp this year.

The March meeting of the Vienna Volunteer Fire Department will be held this evening in the council room in the town hall at Vienna. Several questions of importance are to be taken up, including the arrangements for holding a carnival some time this summer. The new engine house on Church street was completed last week, and a large fire siren installed, which is now in use.

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Volunteer Fire Department at McLean will meet tod at the home of Mrs. J. L. Kefauver.

Persons who wish to exercise their franchise as voters in the coming primary election to nominate a Democratic candidate for the House of Representatives to succeed Representative R. Walton Moore have until the evening of May 4 in which to pay their capitation taxes.

The primary election this year will be held on Tuesday, August 5, and the State election laws require that payment of capitation tax must be made six months prior to the day of election, before they can vote. So far this year approximately 3,000 persons have paid their capitation tax. This tax was due last December.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Floris Presbyterian Church have reelected Mrs. Joseph Hagins president. Other officers elected were Mrs. Wilson M. McNair, vice president; Mrs. William D. Middleton, secretary, and Mrs. Edgar E. Beard, treasurer.

The secretaries of causes elected were: Miss Allie Hudson, spiritual life; Mrs. C. T. Patton, foreign missions; Mrs. Howard O. Peck, assembly's home missions; Mrs. G. A. McLearen, synodical and Presbyterian home missions; Mrs. R. B. Nickell, Christian education and ministerial relief; Mrs. William D. Middleton, Sunday school extension and young people's work; Mrs. R. B. Nickell, literature; Mrs. Wilson M. McNair, Christian social service; Mrs. Edgar E. Beard, historian; Miss Allie Hudson, chairman of the circle, and Mrs. Edgar Beard, chairman of the home circle.

THIRD PARLEY HELD ON BUS FARE BOOST

Alexandria Committee Will Make Report on Matter Wednesday Night.

COUNCIL PRIMARY SLOW

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
312 S. Washington St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

A committee of citizens appointed by the Chember of Commerce held the third of a series of conferences yesterday with Robert L. May, owner of the A. B. & W. bus line and recent purchaser of the Washington-Alexandria Electric Railway, in reference to his announced intention of applying to the State corporation commission on April 8 for an increase in passenger fares between Alexandria, Washington and intermediate points. These conferences with Mr. May and the auditors of the two companies are being held in an attempt to arrive at some satisfactory adjustment of rates on the bus and trolley lines.

While no announcement has been made, it is understood that the meeting yesterday adjourned after practically all the information sought by the committee had been furnished by Mr. May. It is expected another meeting, which will be held tonight, will bring the conferences to a close. This committee is to report to an open meeting in the auditorium of the Elks' Home Wednesday night.

The Democratic primary to be held tomorrow, at which three members of the city council will be nominated, will bring to a close one of the most apathetic campaigns ever known in Alexandria, although it is of great local importance. There are seven candidates for the three vacancies, none of whom have made what could be considered an active campaign.

In the Democratic primary held in 1929 there were 5,565 voters who had paid their poll tax and qualified, and since that time a large area in Arlington County and the Town of Potomac have been annexed, which will add a vote estimated at from 1,200 to 1,500. Three of the Democratic candidates—Arthur Herbert, Mrs. Dolly Peyton Shepperson and Edmund F. Ticer, the last named being the incumbent, are residents of the old section of the city, while four—Mrs. Naomi P. Craver, Richard B. Washington, Emmett C. Davidson and Clyde C. Lamond, are from the annexed territory.

It is expected that the vote in the older section of the city will be extremely light, but the annexed territory is an unknown quantity, and the vote in that section may almost equal that cast in the older section. More than one of the candidates from the annexed territory are expected to poll a considerable vote in the old section, and it is the general opinion that the result of the primary will be extremely difficult to forecast.

Members of Alexandria-Washington Lodge, No. 22, A. F. and A. M., will meet in the Masonic Temple at 2 o'clock this afternoon to attend the funeral of Edward A. Evans, a former resident of Alexandria, who died Friday at his home in Richmond. The funeral services will be conducted at the home of Mr. Evans' mother, Mrs. Laura W. Evans, 322 South St. Asaph street, and the services at the grave will be conducted by the officers and members of Alexandria-Washington Lodge, headed by C. F. Swetnam, worshipful master.

Mr. Evans was a past potentate of Acca Temple, A. A. N. O. M. S., of Richmond.

Mrs. Ella Elizabeth Ballard, aged 70 years, died yesterday at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. A. V. Mitchell, 1410 Cameron street, and the funeral will be held at 1 o'clock tomorrow from the Cunningham Funeral Home, 809 Cameron street, conducted by the Rev. Ryland T. Dodge, pastor of the Baptist Temple. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery, Washington.

The Alexandria Business and Professional Women's Club will have charge of the program over Station WJSV this afternoon from 5 to 6 o'clock, and the following program will be heard: Musical selections, Mrs. Harry B. Caton, Mrs. Orlando Kirk and Mrs. Harrie White, accompanied by Mrs. D. C. Book; Frank Perry, violin selections; Clarence Wells, solo, and a short talk on Alexandria by Mrs. Charles M. Shepperson.

Dr. William R. Smithey, of the University of Virginia, will deliver the last of the series of lectures under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association of this city, this evening at 8 o'clock, in the Maury School auditorium. His subject will be "Educational and Vocational Guidance."

The April meeting of the Mary Custis Lee-Seventeenth Virginia Regiment Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, will be held at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow evening in Lee Camp Hall.

THE NEW WEEK'S BILLS

PALACE

"SARAH AND SON." Paramount's screen version of the novel by Timothy Shea, starring Ruth Chatterton, supported by Frederic March and Master Philippe de Lacey. Directed by Dorothy Arzner. Reviewed Saturday night.

By NELSON B. BELL.

While this subject will unfailingly suffer by the comparison with "Madam X," which it inevitably must provoke, there can be but one appraisal of the histrionic skill displayed by Ruth Chatterton in the maternal title role. While, by the very pattern of the drama, there is no occasion here for the tremendous emotionalism of the Alexander Bisson creation, the thematic impulse is identical and Miss Chatterton's delineation of the central character only slightly less disturbing to the lachrymal glands and no whit less distinctive. By assuming the thick dialect of a German immigrant, known to her early associates of the stage as "Dutch," a star long distinguished on the stage, and of growing importance to the cinema, discloses a totally new facet of a comprehensive and versatile art.

"Sarah and Son" is preponderantly and overwhelmingly a feminine drama. The motivating force of every scene is mother love, the climacteric conflicts are between the real and the alleged mother of Bobby Storm, and the picture, appropriately enough, was directed by Dorothy Arzner, the only distaff member of the Paramount directorial forces.

Sarah Storm is revealed first as the more ambitious half of a team of small time vaudeville hoofers, who marries her partner upon news that her little sister has died in the Vaterland. It is 1915 and the war is on. In a drunken temper, Jimmy Grey deserts his wife and intrusts their son to the wealthy Ashmores for rearing and joins the marines. Not until 1918 in a hospital near the front, does Sarah learn of the whereabouts of her child—and then only as Jim is dying of his wounds. From that point on, the developments converge upon the recovery of her son by Mme. Sarah Storm, who in the meantime has become an international favorite as a grand opera soprano who can command the best legal advice to combat the power of money exerted by those who seek to steal her boy. A love story is interwoven with the primary plot so completely expressed by the title of the picture.

It has been my intention, a trifle more than to intimate that Miss Chatterton is the entire picture. It is her amazingly authentic impersonation of the role of Sarah Storm that dominates every scene. Her assumption of Teutonic dialect is no less convincing than, say, Vilma Banky's native accent, which can not be shaken off. Perhaps not the least noteworthy aspect of Miss Chatterton's preeminence is to be attributed to the nicety of gradation by which her early crudities are overcome as her elevation to broader vision, money and operatic stardom is brought about. An intelligent and finely wrought characterization, if ever there was one.

Frederic March, Master Philippe De Lacey, Fuller Mellish, jr., Gilbert Emery and Doris Lloyd, who played the Russian spy in "Disraeli," are those who lend Miss Chatterton most notable support.

On the stage the Ritz Brothers, three in number, run away with the Loew "High Speed" revue. These multicolored collegians appear first as a triumvirate of masters of ceremonies and then as the trio of vaudevillians who may always be relied upon to panic a house. Others who aid in living up to the title include Olive Faye, a tantalizing blonde singer, guitarist and dancer; Gloria Lee, a brunette dancer with the fastest backovers I have ever seen; Paul Remos and his three gymnastic midgets, familiar to patrons of the old Keith's, and the Chester Hale Girls.

The Hearst Metrotone News in sound, the silent M-G-M newsreel and orchestral overture, "The Rogue Song," with recorded interlude by Lawrence Tibbett complete the goings-on.

METROPOLITAN

"THE GREEN GODDESS." Warner Bros. Vitaphone talking picture, from the play by William Archer, starring George Arliss, supported by Alice Joyce, H. B. Warner, Ralph Forbes and Ivan Simpson. Directed by Alfred Green. Reviewed Saturday night by C. Ransom.

Following almost literally the text of the familiar melodrama that gave George Arliss one of his best opportunities, this rendering offers an effective means of comparing values, as between the stage and the talking screen. For one whose memories of the stage are long and fond, and who glories in its traditions, there must be grief and reluctance in the comparison. If the screen is to conquer the stage we shall lose something splendid and irrecoverable. What we shall gain may be less fine, less admirable in sheer artistry, but the gain, from the point of view of popular entertainment, is none the less real, definite and powerful.

The unescapable fact is that if "The Green Goddess" were available on the same night as both play and picture, with George Arliss in flesh and in shadow, your reviewer, with free entry to either, would choose the picture. And his choice would not be singular or eccentric, but would fairly represent, he believes, the general opinion of those seeking entertainment. The main reason is that the addition of voice has made the close-up an instrument of extraordinary power in dramatic expression.

Mr. Arliss' brilliant portrait of the bland Rajah of Rukh, nursing a bitter fanaticism, under a veneer of ironic courtesy, is brought much more vividly before us by the new magic. The same more intimate approach is ours in sharing the emotions of the little group of three English folk, trapped by an airplane landing in the little Himalayan kingdom, where they become the victims of the rajah's sinister hospitality. Alice Joyce, needless to say, is a delight in the part of Mrs. Crespin. The two men travelers are in the excellent hands of H. B. Warner and Ralph Forbes, and the inimitable Ivan Simpson fortunately survives in his original part of Watkins, the rajah's cockney valet.

The well-known story is one of cold thrills and horrors, with bravery and sacrifice in the face of impending death, lifted to a high plane by a running pattern of subtle and penetrating humor. The famous English dramatic critic wrote the play to show how a melodrama should be built and had his tongue in his cheek, but the adventures are no less absorbing for that. It is a fascinating story, magnificently told.

Of the shorter numbers on the bill the most interesting is the newsreel, for the sake of Graham McNamee's new line of running comment. This is an innovation that will take a strong hold. It adds much more to the news than noises. There are two Vitaphone Variety short numbers, both feeble. Betty and Jerry Browne appear in one called "Let's Elope"; the other, in Technicolor, is called "The Jazz Rehearsal," and it is just that.

EARLE

"SLIGHTLY SCARLET." Paramount production, adapted from story by Percy Heath, featuring Clive Brook and Evelyn Brent, supported by Paul Lukas, Helen Ware and Eugene Pallette. Directed by Louis Gasnier and Edwin Knopf. Reviewed Saturday afternoon.

Such romance as the Mediterranean is popularly supposed to inspire in the breasts of impassioned lovers, in combination with the predatory idea that formed the basis of "Cheating Cheaters," forms the groundwork of this interesting and suspenseful melodrama of gem thieves on the Riviera. There is a priceless necklace of pearls in the possession of a family of American nouveau riche for which the charming feminine operative of a notorious band of high-game crooks and a suave young Englishman, operating on his own, match wits. As it falls out, the bauble is never stolen, but a couple of hearts are, proving, no doubt, that all that were ever matched were half-wits!

Any assumption that the conspicuous success of the picture as brisk entertainment must be due to the smartness of its treatment rather than the newness of its theme will prove wholly incorrect. The film is impeccably made. There is cast about the piece an atmosphere of worldly well being a deliberate and delightful luxury and a savoir faire that brings to mind the sort of thing John Drew used to do on the stage. The characters of the story are ostensibly ladies and gentlemen, whatever their ultimate designs upon the jewel box; the story's variant locales are the exclusive haunts of the pleasure seekers and the palatial villas of the fabulously rich; its denouement is such as to disarm those captious souls who hold that retributive justice must overtake the wanderers from the paths of rectitude.

The two pivotal characters are the "Countess" Stavrin and the Hon. Courtney Parkes. Lucy Stavrin, born in Chicago, has fallen under the dominance of Malatroff, head of the gang of jewel thieves; Parkes is a pretty good crook on his own account. As between the two roles the scales should have been more evenly balanced than they are by Evelyn Brent and Clive Brook. Mr. Brook is perfectly cast as a suave and polished English gentleman, inured to all of the opulence that the playground of the world's rich can afford. Miss Brent is not so judiciously allotted to her part. Icy, hard and staccato, she seems to me much more effective in the melodramatic moments of the action in those given over to the gentler moods.

Eugene Pallette, Helen Ware and Virginia Bruce do admirably as the Americans of millions from Youngstown, Ohio, where their rival overall factories are among the city's show places. Paul Lukas is ominous as the fashionable brigand chieftain. The direction, settings, photography and recording are above reproach.

Two short-sound subjects give the bill body. Eddie Canter in "Getting a Ticket" scores in an audible sketch that has served him well before, and "A Night in a Dormitory" visualizes a considerable musical revue in which the principal roles are taken by Ginger Rogers, Ruth Hamilton and Theima White.

The newsreel and orchestral overture of old and new melodies of the South complete a program of well balanced merit. N. B. B.

RKO-KEITH

"LOVIN' THE LADIES." A Radio Pictures presentation of William LeBaron's successful stage play, "I Love You," adapted for the screen by J. Walter Rubin, starring Richard Dix, supported by Lois Wilson, Rita Laroy and Allen Kearns. Directed by Melville Brown. Reviewed Saturday night by W. A. Whitney.

Another stage play comes to the screen in "Lovin' the Ladies," based on William LeBaron's Broadway success. For the first time the screen has here brought together, if advices received are to be entirely believed, a play's two leads, for Lois Wilson is said to have played opposite Mr. Dix in the stage version, "I Love You."

In this sophisticated drama of modern love, Mr. Dix excels his former role in "Seven Keys to Baldpate," and portrays the hero who is inveigled into making love to prove that environment is the essential element in matchmaking. The environment works out all right, but what happens when she appears to be another's fiancee forms the basis for many ludicrous situations.

Mr. Dix is called upon to play two types of parts in the same role—a poor but honest electrician from the great middle class and a suave, blase, and bored member of the "aristocracy." In the latter character Mr. Dix unconsciously, but none the less effectively, burlesques Clive Brook in most delightfully humorous fashion.

Opposite Mr. Dix is Lois Wilson, who plays her small part in a perfectly fascinating manner. Allen Kearns is cast as the maker of the environment for the excruciating circumstances, and he, with Mr. Dix, runs away with the picture. Among the others in the cast are Rita Laroy and Renee MacReady.

The picture, flawlessly recorded and reproduced, possesses an admirable clarity of photography. The direction leaves no room for improvement. The whole makes a fast-moving comedy which keeps the audience continually howling in uproarious glee, even to the extent as times of obliterating the lines of the actors. Four subtitles, demarking the "acts," add greatly to the appreciation of the continuity.

The supporting bill is as varied as it is entertaining. "Big Top Champions," a Grantland Rice sportlight, deals with the winter training quarters of Barnum-Bailey-Ringling Bros. circus in Florida. James Stanley, in the Van Buren song sketch, "Mandalay," sings the Kipling number, supported by an orchestra and a male quartet. An Aesop's Fable and a release of Pathe Sound News complete the screen subjects.

Freddie Clark and his R-K-Olians offer a medley of popular airs for their interlude, with specialty numbers by various members of the orchestra.

The home is reached by driving out Wisconsin avenue to Leland street, just beyond the Chevy Chase Club, then turning right and proceeding three blocks to Forty-fourth stret, then left two blocks to the property. It will be open for inspection daily from 1 o'clock in the afternoon to 9 o'clock in the evening.

FOX

"SOUTH SEA ROSE." Fox production, starring Lenore Ulric, supported by Charles Bickford, Kenneth MacKenna, Farrell MacDonald and Elizabeth Patterson. Directed by Allan Dwan. Reviewed Sunday afternoon.

If you liked Lenore Ulric in "Kiki," you will like her in this.

Again she is the girl of French extraction, garbed, most of the time, in abbreviated costumes of most bizarre nature, or filmy lingerie more expository than the grass skirts of the hula-hula islands where we first make her acquaintance as Rosalie Dumay—which should not, under any circumstances be called "Dummy." Nothing of the restrained or the delicate in this one. "South Sea Rose" is a drama of the fleshpots, frankly and unequivocally sex, but fast-moving, exciting and funny for all that.

A young sea captain goes through a bogus marriage ceremony with Rosalie, whom he has virtually abducted from the South Sea convent in which she had been lodged by her guardian, and takes his bride to the New England home presided over by a straight-laced spinster sister. The village doctor is a nice-looking lad and and when Capt. Briggs departs for Bordeaux, to nab the supposed fortune of his "wife," is frequently called to attend the comic maladies of the imported "cannibal." She is little less than that. How it comes out, you'll never guess and I have no intention of telling.

Lenore Ulric, in the title role, is adept in etching a sinister character with complete attention to detail. Her allure is wholly physical. There is never a time when recourse is had to anything approaching subtlety in the depiction of the central character or the shaping of events in which she is concerned. She is a vibrant, active and assiduous animal with a French accent, and that is all.

The complete characterizer, perhaps, would be to say that Miss Ulric owns one of the dirtiest laughs known to the American stage—made familiar in both "Kiki" and "Lulu Belle"—and has occasion to use it overtime in this production. A good show!

Charles Bickford is once more the sailor man, although he has nothing so completely commensurate with his ability as he was afforded opposite Greta Garbo in "Anna Christie." He does a workmanlike job, nevertheless, and is ably assisted by J. Farrel MacDonald, as his first mate. Kenneth MacKenna is the doctor in the case and does a less convincing job than he recently contributed to "Men Without Women." This is largely atoned for, however, by the fact that Tom
